ALFONSO GIVES CROWN TO SON, LONDON HEARS

Abdication of Ousted King in Don Juan's Favor Reported.

CARLIST RENOUNCES CLAIMS TO THRONE

Prince of Asturias as Well as Don Jaime Paves Way for New Pretender.

London (Tuesday), July 28 (A.P.). The Daily Express this morning says, under a Madrid date, that former King Alfonso formally abdicated the Spanish throne in favor of his third son, Don Juan de Bourbon, at a family council at Fontainebleau last week.

The Express attributed the story to a former minister under the Primo de Rivera dictatorship who, it was said, spent a few hours in Madrid on business recently, although he was sought by the police.

The alleged retirement of the former king, the paper quoted the minister as saying, was accomplished with extreme legality and with virtually no ceremony. The family, he said, gathered in one of the apartments of the former king's hotel at Fontainebleau and those of the ministers of the old regime who still remained loyal were convoked as witnesses.

De la Cierva Present.

These witnesses, the story said, included Juan de la Cierva, minister of the interior in the former cabinet of Premier Berenguer.

Alfonso, it was said, looked much older than the night three months ago when he said good-by to his tearful court. All the papers, the story said, had been carefully prepared in advance and there were four abdications, first that of Alfonso himself, then that of his eldest son, the Prince of Asturias, who is a victim of hemophilia, and then that of Don Jaime, the second son, who is deaf and dumb.

The fourth and unexpected abdication, it was said, was that of the elder Don Jaime, Carlist pretender to the throne and great-grandson of Ferdinand VII. The Carlist Don Jaime was not present, however, the minister was quoted as saying.

Don Juan in Naval School.

All these were asserted to have signed away their claims to the throne in favor of the Infante Don Juan, the healthy lad who is now undergoing naval training at Dartmouth, England.

Alfonso, the story said, adheres to the theory that he himself, and not the monarchy, was voted down by the Spanish people and that he was willing to step out in favor of Don Juan to make possible an eventual revival of the monarchist cause.

It is asserted that this event ended the split in the family that began when Ferdinand VII repudiated the law of his Bourbon ancestors and left the crown to his daughter Isabella instead of to his brother Carlos, bringing two wars and countless conspiracies upon Spain.

Don Juan Is 17.

Don Juan de Bourbon, third son of King Alfonso, has been a student at the naval academy in England since shortly after his father's ab-

Couzens Wins Battle Against Name Change

Detroit, July 27 (U.P.).—United States Senator James Couzens today won his court fight to prevent Abraham Dworkin, of Detroit, from changing his name to Albert Cousens, the same name as that of the senator's brother.

Judge Henry S Hulburt denied Dworkin's petition, agreeing with Couzens' attorney that the change was "against public policy" and might tend to confuse identities.

Dry Agents' Trick Shocks U. S. Court

Appeals Judges Denounce Methods and Free Convicted Police.

Chicago, July 27 (U.P.).—Methods of dry agents in trapping liquor law violators so "shocked" the judges of the United States District Court of Appeals that they reversed today the convictions of five Indianapolis policemen accused of conspiracy to violate the dry law. Patrolmen Martin O'Brien, Claude Ridenbaugh, Ralph Lambert, David Curran and Thomas Gray automatically were freed.

Three dry agents, said the opinion, hired a Negro, Horace Lyle, to open a speakeasy in Indianapolis. The policemen visited the place, purchased liquor and received small sums of money from the dry agents turned bootleggers.

"That there was a conspiracy to violate the prohibition law there can be no doubt," the decision continued. "The conspiracy was conceived by the three prohibition agents who enlisted the services of a decoy. Such a situation is not dissimilar to the case where one arranges through a third party for a robbery to be committed upon himself with a view of receiving a re..ard. The Government should not be permitted to adopt means which are condemned by the court when practiced by its citizens."

KELLOGG ON SCENE IN HENDERSON CASE

Sanitarium Head in Capital to Press Claim; Codicil to 1927 Will Filed.

Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, head of the Battle Creek Sanitarium and College, made it clear yesterday that he "intends to take whatever action is necessary to carry out the wishes" of Mrs. Mary F. Henderson, but added an important qualification that "probably the courts would have to determine what her wishes were."

That Dr. Kellogg intends to fight five of the wills and one of the codicils left by the dowager of Henderson Castle at her death recently was almost certain yesterday, for attorneys acting for him filed a codicil to the will of July 13, 1927, yesterday in District Supreme Court.

The noted exponent of race betterment through health reached Washington yesterday and said he came here merely to study the situation. He declined to discuss the legal aspects of the case, holding that as a litigant in it, it would hardly be proper for him to discuss the possible course of legal action his side would take in court. He said he had left that side of the case to his attorneys.

"You must remember," he declared, "that this case will be tried in the courts and not through the newspapers. Under the circumstances, I don't feel that I should discuss it."

Dr. Kellogg said yesterday that he had placed the case in the hands of the law firm of Frank J. Hogan, but at the offices of the firm yesterday it was stated that Dr. Kellogg had not asked the firm to act for him. The new codicil, however, was filed by Attorney Nelson B Hartson, a member of the firm. He declined to comment on the codicil other than to say that it was sent here by Dr. Kellogg.

"It was a great surprise to me," Dr. Kellogg declared, "when I learned that the college had been left the bulk of Mrs. Henderson's estate under the terms of her will. I had no idea that she had made such a will until I read of it in the newspapers, and then I was further surprised to learn that she had made two earlier wills.

GERMAN TRUST IS EMPHASIZED BY MACDONALD

ENGLISH OFFICIALS BRUENING'S GUESTS

Stimson Quits Berlin by Air; Visits Holland; in London Today.

Berlin, July 27 (A.P.). — Great Britain's confidence in Germany is "undiminished," Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald declared tonight in an address at a dinner at the German chancellery, where he was the guest of Chancellor Heinrich Bruening.

Referring to the visit of himself and the British foreign secretary, Arthur Henderson, to Berlin, he added, "We are firmly convinced" that if Germany continues her efforts, "without giving way to despair, other nations will help her and not suffer her to go under."

The British prime minister and foreign secretary arrived here separately during the day, and both were given tremendous ovations by the German people. The demonstration for Prime Minister MacDonald, as he stepped off the train, was said to be the wildest welcome a German crowd ever gave a foreign statesman.

Germany Held Doing Utmost.

Foreign Secretary Henderson had arrived earlier in the day. Both were guests at the dinner. Chancellor Bruening, after toasting President Paul von Hindenburg of Germany and King George V, welcomed his guests by declaring the German people "felt a lively gratitude" for this visit of leading British statesmen.

They had come, he said, at a serious time, but a time when Germany was "doing its utmost to master a crisis." The country, he added, must "rely upon the cooperation of foreign countries, which, by withdrawing short-term credits, had brought the crisis to a head."

"Germany," he said, "is grateful for Great Britain's unreserved and ready acceptance of the Hoover plan."

Responding to the toast of welcome, Prime Minister MacDonald said:

Confidence Is Undiminished.

"We were glad to receive your visit to London and we were equally pleased to accept your return invitation. Such mutual visits have become an absolute necessity for developing and strengthening good understanding in the world.

"We have not come to Berlin, however, merely to return your call, but also to show the world that, despite the difficulties of the present situation, our confidence in Germany continues undiminished."

Declaring that Germany is passing through "serious times," the prime minister added that he and his colleagues were "filled with admiration for the country" and firmly convinced that "if she exerts all her intellectual, moral and economic powers to get on her feet again, without giving way to despair, other nations will help her," because, he said, "a free, self-respecting Germany is indispensable."

"The results of the London conference," he said, "have not been a sensation, but those things upon which an agreement was reached are already carried out to a great extent.

"The study of the German financial position has begun, the advisors pro-

Bill to Ask Removal Of Jay's Body Here

Tarrytown, N. Y., July 27 (U.P.).—A plan to remove the body of John Jay, first chief justice of the United States, from its grave in Rye, N. Y., to a niche in the new Supreme Court Building in Washington was revealed today. Representative Charles D. Millard, of Tarrytown, announced that he intends to introduce a bill at the next session of Congress to authorize the transfer.

Jay spent most of his life in Westchester County, but Millard holds that the body should be in a national shrine as recognition for his services to the country.

END SEEN NEAR IN TAXI BATTLE; HEARING TODAY

Stabilization of Rates Is Hoped for From Parley This Afternoon.

LEADERS ASK KEECH TO CALL CONFERENCE

New Schedule, It Is Said, Will Not Be Above Original 35-Cent Fare.

The end of the taxicab rate war and a stabilization of taxicab operation in the District loomed late yesterday following a meeting of the Public Utilities Commission and the announcement of People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech that he would hold an informal hearing of all operators at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Should this afternoon's conference effect an amicable and workable agreement, probably with a new schedule of rates for zone cab operation, the commission likely will drop the matter for the time being at least. But, if this agreement is not forthcoming, the utilities body will call a public hearing and seek to establish rates.

The whole taxicab controversy and proposed steps for settlement were discussed at length yesterday afternoon by members of the commission. Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, chairman of the Board of District Commissioners, Maj. D. A. Davison, acting Engineer Commissioner, Corporation Counsel William W. Bride, and People's Counsel Keech.

Seek Brides' Views.

Because of the vagueness of the public utilities act regarding the commission's authority to regulate taxicab operation, several questions were submitted to Mr. Bride for an opinion before any further action is taken. Meanwhile, the commission will await the outcome of the operators' conference.

Though Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chairman of the utilities body, would make no prediction, it appeared certain that the commission will make no effort, at least at this time, to place meters on all taxicabs. He admitted, in fact, that the two-year-old order requiring meters would not be revived just now.

The hearing to be held by the people's counsel this afternoon was called at the request of Leon J. Brill, of the Bell Cab Co., and Albert W. Jacobson, of the City Cab and the Stop-Me Cab Cos. It will not be limited to any class of taxicab operators, according to Mr. Keech, and it will seek an agreement that will be beneficial to the taxi companies, the drivers and the public.

Just what rate may evolve from this conference is obviously speculative, but it appears certain that it will not be above the original 35 cents for the city proper and it is likely that it may be lower. The three zones are expected to be made uniform for all operators also.

While whatever rates may be agreed to at this meeting will probably prevail among the major operators, they cannot be enforced for all taxicab operators until adopted by the Utilities Commission. And the commission cannot adopt them without holding a public hearing, for which there must be the customary twenty days' notice.

No Approval Necessary.

If all of the larger companies agree to a new schedule of rates, however, the commission will likely not take any action. The rates will be submitted to the commission by all of the companies involved, but no approval will be necessary.

Though there was no discussion of the disastrous competition which the cheap taxicabs have created for the street cars during the rate war, the commission obtained yesterday, upon request, figures showing that the 10, 15 and 20 cent cabs have told heavily in the revenues of the street railways and the bus line.

Statistics submitted were for each day last week, Monday to last Sun-

Police Foil Plot On Wedding Train

Roumanian Nuptial Party Escapes Bomb; Many Arrests Made.

Bucharest, Roumania, July 27 (U.P.). Police tonight announced the frustration of a plot, laid to Communists, to wreck the train which carried royal guests to the wedding of Princess Ileana and Archduke Anton of Hapsburg at Einais on Saturday.

About 100 persons were arrested in Jassy, a dozen in Bessarabia and several in other cities in connection with the plot, which police described as nation-wide in scope.

The announcement said a bomb had exploded on the Bucharest-Ploesti railroad line Saturday a short time before the wedding train was scheduled to pass over the spot.

40 Icebergs in One Day Sighted by Expedition

Boston, July 27 (A.P.).—The sighting of 40 icebergs in one day was reported in a communication received today from Lieut. Comdr. N. G. Ricketts, commander of the Coast Guard's oceanographic expedition in Northern latitudes.

The purpose of the expedition is to obtain data through which the annual invasion of the steamer lanes by icebergs may be forecast.

French Spokesmen Hit Customs Union

Austro-German Pact Held Illegal in Arguments to Hague Body.

The Hague, Holland, July 27 (A.P.). Jules Basdevant occupied most of today's session of the Permanent Court of International Justice arguing France's objection to the Austro-German customs union.

Joseph Paul-Boncour, also representing France, concluded his plea against the proposed pact early and M. Basdevant devoted his address to a discussion of legal technicalities which he insisted prohibited the pact under previous treaties.

He will conclude his argument tomorrow and will be followed by the representatives of Italy and Czechoslovakia.

Striking Miners Ask Aid of Ohio Governor

Columbus, Ohio, July 27 (U.P.).—A delegation representing striking miners in eastern Ohio appealed to Gov. White today for aid, charging violence on the part of county officials.

They sought the right to picket bituminous mines and declared they represented 5,000 miners in Belmont, Jefferson and Harrison Counties.

2 Cubans and War Supplies Seized by New York Police

New York, July 27 (A.P.).—A trunkful of surgical and military supplies said to have been intended for Cuban revolutionists was seized by authorities today and two men were held. Both are Cubans. One was held on charges of inciting to revolution.

The trunk contained two complete uniforms, metal helmets, flashlights and numerous bottles of medicines used in treating gunshot wounds.

The two arrested gave their names to Department of Justice officials as Emilio N. Robaina, 40, who said he was a newspaperman, and Jorge de Zaldo, 33, who claimed to be the son of a distinguished Cuban family.

Robaina, police said, is a Cuban exile. He was held on charges of inciting to revolution. De Zaldo was charged with violation of the law against possession of firearms.

Detectives confiscated the trunk when they were summoned by a garage man who said he smelled chloroform fumes coming from a trunk which had been stored in his garage. Information obtained from him led to the arrest of De Zaldo, who told police that the trunk had been placed in his care by a "friend," for whom police are searching.

De Zaldo, police said, then gave them information which led to the arrest of Robaina at a hotel.

De Zaldo told police and reporters he was the nephew of a "prominent Wall street broker," F. De Zaldo, and that his father was a former government official of Cuba.

Havana, July 27 (A.P.).—Emilio N. Robaina and Jorge De Zaldo, held by United States authorities on charges of possessing arms and medicines alleged to have been intended for the use of Cuban revolutionists, are well known to police here, the secret police said tonight.

Robaina is known as a newspaperman who left Cuba after losing his position with an American syndicate, but he was not deported, police said.

De Zaldo was well known as a polo player and is the son of Carlos De Zaldo, prominent Cuban banker. Police said De Zaldo had been identified with the Nationalist Union an anti-Machado political organization.

Police said neither man could be extradited as a political offender, but it was possible they would be returned to Cuba as undesirables.

THIRD HEAD IN DAY IS NAMED BY CHILE

Esteban Montero Becomes Acting President While Ibanez Flees Land.

Santiago, Chile, July 27 (A.P.).—Juan Esteban Montero, who was chosen premier of Chile's new cabinet yesterday, became the third man to head the country's government within a space of about 24 hours when he assumed the vice presidency this afternoon. His accession followed the resignation of Pedro Opazo, who was named acting president after the resignation of President Ibanez last night.

In the meantime, President Ibanez crossed the border into Argentina with Senora de Ibanez and a group of intimate friends. He made the journey on a special train, manned by officials of the Transandean Railway and accompanied by a coachful of soldiers.

The resignation of Senor Ojazo as vice president was handed in at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Senor Montero, who, as premier, immediately assumed the vice presidency, and, according to the Chilean constitution, the acting presidency had been chosen last night by Acting President Opazo to form a cabinet.

The resignation of Senor Opazo was said to have been due to a hostile attitude on the part of the Chilean Senate, because of his being a relative of the wife of President Ibanez and because of a belief that the public at large would not show him the proper cooperation.

About noon various demonstrations of public feeling began against Vice President Opazo. He immediately called the cabinet into conference and later issued a decree turning the authority over to Senor Esteban Montero. He then issued a manifesto to the nation explaining his action.

Montero is popular with the public and it was expected that his assuming the authority would have a beneficial effect throughout the country.

Senor Esteban Montero, the new vice president, is a lawyer, about 55 years old. He had never occupied a government position until he was made minister of the interior in the short-lived cabinet of former Premier Blanquier recently, but he has been vice president of the radical wing of the Liberal party.

The belief prevailed today that for-

Royal Pair Enjoy Tour By Airship

Lakehurst, N. J., July 27 (A.P.).—The naval dirigible Los Angeles slipped through the sunset to a landing here at 5:45 p. m. (E. S. T.) today after bearing the King and Queen of Siam and their party on an eight-hour aerial tour of the metropolitan area.

The royal pair were enthusiastic over the jaunt. They said it was one of the "finest experiences" they have had since they came to the United States. The king told newspapermen he had "one of the best times in my life."

The Los Angeles went aloft with the royal party at 9:27 a. m. (E. S. T.) and first pointed its silver nose toward New York City. After hovering over Manhattan, the dirigible purred on out across Long Island, then cir-

MOSES OUSTER HINT BRINGS VOTE THREAT

President Pro Tempore, in Magazine, Suggests He Might Retaliate.

(Associated Press.)

Internecine war is threatening Republican control of the next Senate and the House.

Republicans have a slender plurality of one in the Senate and the Democrats are not eager to assume the responsibility organization of this independent branch entils.

Senator Moses, of New Hampshire, the president pro tempore, in a frank manner disclosed the Republican conflict that is impending in an article in the Saturday Evening Post.

It so happens that Senator Moses is the target of some of the disgruntled Republican independents, who hold the balance of power in the next Senate and the House. They have intimated that the scalp of Senator Moses as president pro tempore is to be removed next session.

Senator Moses is aware of the threat and through the unique medium of a magazine article he informed his prospective scalpers this week in this form:

"In the Seventy-second Congress (the next Congress), when the margin in both chambers is inappreciable as between the two parites, it is wholly conceivable that a single vote, cast through the pique, resentment,

HOOVER MAY TODAY DISCUSS WAGE CUTS

Doak Explains Lamont's Condonation of Temporary Reductions.

Luray, Va., July 27 (U.P.).—Indication that the White House might have something to say tomorrow concerning "temporary" wage cuts, which were condoned in emergency cases by Secretary of Commerce Lamont, was given at the President's Rapidan camp today.

The President, completing a four-day rest, described as his first genuine relaxation in more than a month, declined to comment on Lamont's letter or any other official development.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Doak yesterday said the administration's attitude toward wage cuts was the same as it had been throughout the depression, although some corporations are reported to have reduced pay.

Doak was asked about a letter Secretary Lamont wrote to Representative Condon (Democrat), Rhode Island, in which Mr. Lamont said some corporations not well protected by reserves were faced with the prospect of closing down or seeking temporary wage reductions.

Doak said he felt the letter was only a frank discussion of the situation by the Secretary of Commerce.

"The position of the administration regarding wage cutting," said Doak, "has not been changed in so far as I know and I feel that if there was a change I would certainly know it."

"The President's position in the matter of wage reductions is well known and understood," said Mr. Lamont's letter to Mr. Condon. "No one could have done more to maintain wage rates."

"When the conference was held in the fall of 1929 representatives of various industries expressed themselves in favor of maintaining wage rates and even though they were not sent as delegates of their industries or even of their own companies and had no authority to pledge their companies or industries to any definite plan of action. Nevertheless without exception the industries represented have maintained the wage rates that were in effect two years ago and the influence of the conference and its conclusions have succeeded in marvelous manner in sustaining wages.

"As the period of depression lengthens many corporations which were not well protected by reserves accumulated in years of good business find themselves at the present time in extremely difficult positions. Many of them have already cut dividends and salaries. Some of them are faced with the prospect of closing down altogether and thus creating more unemployment or alternatively seeking temporary reductions.

"I very greatly regret that these cases should occur, but I do not believe it is the duty of the Government to interfere in such cases. Neither do I think such interference would be effective."

Lamont's letter was in reply to one from Condon written to President Hoover protesting against wage cuts in Rhode Island.

Condon said Saturday at Pawtucket that the Lamont letter was a disappointment.

Huey Long Says He Elected Broussard, Now His Foe

New Orleans, July 27.—The New Orleans Item today quoted Gov. Huey P. Long as replying to the recent attack on him by Senator Edwin S. Broussard, of Louisiana, with the declaration: "If it hadn't been for Huey Long, Edwin S. Broussard would not be in the United States Senate today."

Senator Broussard, one time political friend of the governor, revealed an open break Saturday night, when he issued a statement charging that the executive was holding the governor's office illegally following his, Long's, election to the United States Senate. Broussard said he would oppose Long's slate of candidates in the coming State elections.

Gov. Long, replying, was quoted as saying:

"Broussard has not spent enough time in Louisiana to know what it is all about down here. I fear he has been depending on the newspapers for his information, and if he has, he has lots to learn. His announcement that he will not support my ticket does not cause me to be much concerned. His attack was uncalled for."

ORIENT FLIGHT BY LINDBERGHS SET FOR TODAY

Aviator and Wife Reach Capital Hoping for Quick Start.

CASTLE ENTERTAINS COUPLE AT DINNER

Canadian Veteran Says They Have Chosen Dangerous Route in Canada.

(United Press.)

Charles A. Lindbergh and his wife arrived at Anacostia Naval Air Station at 5:02 p. m. yesterday for a brief visit to the Capital before they start on their long "vacation" flight to Japan and China.

They motored from the station to the State Department and then to the home of Acting Secretary of State William R. Castle, jr., to spend the night. There was an informal dinner, with a number of State Department Far Eastern experts as fellow guests. They were there to tell the Lindberghs something of the country over which they must fly. F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War, also was there.

Lindbergh hopes to leave here today, flying direct to North Haven, Me., summer home of Senator Dwight W. Morrow, Mrs. Lindbergh's father, for the first overnight halt.

Memories of Triumphal Return.

Lindbergh's job here, in addition to getting what information he may need regarding flying conditions, is to have some instruments checked and fix up final papers in preparation for landings in foreign countries—Canada, Siberia, Japan and China. He will go to the State Department this morning and hopes to do most of the task there. He still must get a Japanese visa and he will leave as soon as possible, but is not even sure he will be able to leave today.

The Lindberghs' landing yesterday brought back memories of his return to the United States after his notable Paris flight. On that occasion in the cruiser Memphis he steamed up the eastern branch of the Potomac to the Navy Yard, passing by the Naval Air Station where he landed yesterday.

Lindbergh left North Beach, N. Y., at 3:03 p. m. (E. S. T.), with Mrs. Lindbergh in the rear cockpit consulting a little road map of the intervening country. They were slowed up a bit by the heavy load their black and red Lockheed-Sirius plane was carrying, and by the fact that their plane now has pontoons. They were sighted over the Army War College, across the eastern branch from the station, at 4.57.

Few Witness Arrival.

The whine of their plane's powerful motor became louder and louder, Lindbergh circled the station and the adjoining Bolling Field twice, sweeping widely out over the river and inland again. He taxied up river directly in the path the Memphis had taken on its arrival from Europe, when the river was filled with boats and the air was quivering with the shriek of sirens and cheers.

There were but a couple of lazy motorboats on the water yesterday when Lindbergh turned the plane in sharply toward the landing stage. At the station, instead of the band and the crowd at the Navy Yard, there were 100 people, mostly there on duty in connection with the arrival of the plane.

The tide was going out and Lindbergh had difficulty in getting close to the landing party up the slanting concrete stage. He cut off the motor at 5:07 and jumped out onto the wing, then to a pontoon. He shook hands first with the commandant, Commander W. G. Child, who walked out on the foot-wide "dock" that can be slid into the water to land seaplane crews.

Colonel Discusses Plans.

Mrs. Lindbergh jumped out by herself. The colonel was wearing gray trousers, blue shirt, blue tie, black shoes and black socks. She wore a tan shirt, open at the neck, brown jodhpurs, beneath which a pair of light blue socks peeped out, suede walking shoes, leather trimmed, and a pretty white flying helmet. The colonel's helmet was, as usual, dark brown. Both had taken off their parachutes.

It took Lindbergh and his wife some time to hand out, to seamen, part of the voluminous baggage for their flight—first a bunch of charts, then leather flying coats, Hudson Bay blankets and similar equipment. They climbed back into the plane again and a Navy motorboat towed them out to a buoy up river, where the plane was moored for the night. The Lindberghs had hardly reached the dock, to be greeted again by Commander Childs, when electricians began rigging up lights on the plane to guard it from a possible colliding motorboat.

Lindbergh, after briefly discussing his plans, went with his wife to the office of Secretary Castle at the State Department, in Castle's limousine. Castle was awaiting them, and Lindbergh talked at length to newspaper men at a special conference.

May Fly Back From China.

Lindbergh said his plane and instruments were in good shape, but that he wished to have a few special instruments and his radio transmitter given a final test. He repeated his former statements that he might fly back from China, but did not know the route he would take. He said he expected to cruise at 105 miles an hour, the most econotmical speed, most of the time, to save gas. He will carry a normal load of 350 gallons. He plans to stop overnight at each halt, and has made preparations for fueling. The longest overwater hop will be when he leaves Nome, Alaska, for the Asian mainland.

The 7,000-mile route to Japan will take them to New York or North Haven, Me.; Ottawa, Canada; Hudson Bay, the north coast of Canada, Alaska, Siberia; the Kurile Islands, Japan and China. They have aboard emergency food and pistols, in addition to full camping supplies.

Lindbergh Route Criticized.

Edmonton, Alta., July 27 (U.P.).—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh have selected the "dirtiest flying conditions possible" for their journey to the Orient, C. H. Dickins, veteran of the Canadian Airways, said today.

He has flown the route from Baker Lake to Aklavik, across the Badlands, a dreary stretch of sand ridges, rock and water, devoid of vegetation, and he calls it one of the worst stretches of flying country in the world.

"Lindbergh certainly has picked a dirty route," Dickins said. "I believe he should have planned to go farther south. The best route, in my opinion, would be more directly west or come to Edmonton and go north to Aklavik. There is a continuous chain of trading posts from here to Aklavik and plenty of Lakes."

Fog, caused by the blazing sun beating the cold water, will be one of Lindbergh's obstacles, Dickins said. If Lindbergh skirts the Artic Ocean north of Baker Lake, he will find more fog, but also an occasional trading post or Eskimo settlement. The only post with radio communication is Coppermine. If the inland route is chosen, Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh will encounter less fog, but they will not see a human being because even Eskimos avoid the Badlands.

In case of a forced landing, rescuers would have to go by air.

Point Barrow Ice Remains.

Even at Churchill the fliers will encounter trouble, for there is a heavy rip tide of 15 miles an hour in the harbor and two airplanes, each dragging a 400-pound concrete anchor, have been lost there. Aklavik, however, is a more hospitable town for fliers; it is touched regularly by air-mail pilots and the Lindberghs will find every facility, including fuel. There is a government radio station at Aklavik.

The proposed route of the Lindberghs is from Ottawa to Moose Factory, 500 miles away; thence 750 miles to Churchill; 390 to Baker Lake, and then comes the longest phase of the flight—to Aklavik, 1,100 miles away. It is about 500 miles to Point Barrow and a similar distance to Nome.

A wireless message to the Northwest Mounted Police Station here this week said ice at Point Barrow still was solid. In 1913 the ice was solid all summer and provisions could not be taken to the post.

Radio Has Long Range.

New York, July 27 (A.P.).—With only some Government formalities to attend to in Washington and the baby to be kissed at North Haven, Me., before the actual start of their long vacation flight to the Orient, Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh took off from Long Island Sound for the Capital at 3 p. m., E. S. T., today.

As long as possible on their long trek Col. Lindbergh—or rather Mrs. Lindbergh, for she is the radio operator—will keep in touch with the Pan-American Airways Station at North Beach, Queens. The Lindbergh radio, which is the same as the one in the North Beach Station, has a daytime range of about 3,000 miles and a night-time maximum about twice that.

An odd item in the Lindbergh luggage was a machete, a heavy-bladed, slightly curved sword, such as is used for cutting sugar cane in the tropics. Asked to explain his object in taking such an implement, he said:

"We expect to get pretty far South, possibly in the tropics, it may be useful."

The machete can be used with swinging motion like a sickle for cutting underbrush.

Both the Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh carried blankets. They had also a tent, five canteens of water and 50 pounds of food, modeled on Army and Navy emergency rations.

Their take-off here was notable for its absence of officialdom. The attaches of the Japanese Embassy were present, with Col. Henry Breckinridge, former Assistant Secretary of War.

Col. Lindbergh's only weapon beside the machete was a .38-caliber pistol.

Court Order Suspends Lima Paper.

Lima, Peru, July 27 (U.P.).—The newspaper La Prensa, former government organ, was not published today because the plant was closed by a court order after bankruptcy proceedings brought by Armando Mantecon de Lolmo, Spanish advertising director and journalist, brought here under contract from New York in 1927 by the La Prensa board of directors. Mantecon's action resulted from alleged breach of his contract.

CHERRINGTON HITS WET EXPOSE STAND

Secretary Hurley Says U. S. Has No Police Power to Use at Colon.

(Associated Press.)

Ernest H. Cherrington, secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, said yesterday that attacks upon the administration because saloons were reported to exist upon Government-owned property in Panama illustrated what he termed "the hypocrisy of the wets."

"Attacks of wet groups and wet newspapers on President Hoover because of the discovery that the property of the Panama Railroad, a Government-owned agency, is used for saloons and brothels," Cherrington said, "reveal their essential hypocrisy as well as their unvarying determination to 'smear' the President regardless of the feebleness of the pretext."

Secretary Hurley yesterday considered the charges, made by Nelson Rounsevell, editor of the Panama-American. Hurley asserted every lease made by the Government in Colon, Panama, named in the charges, contained a clause preventing use of the property for immoral purposes. The Secretary of War said this was as far as the Government could go since it had no police power in the Panama city. He added negotiations were under way for sale of the land.

Cherrington contended President Hoover had no responsibility in the matter, but was being attacked by antiprohibitionists because of conditions they themselves sought to bring back to the United States.

"If these advocates of the liquor traffic were sincere," he said, "they would either applaud the existence of the Panama dives or else desist from their frantic efforts to create similar conditions in this country."

Rounsevell said the United States, which owns the property through the Panama Railroad, should sell it. He contended it was one of the "sore spots" in relations between this Government and Central American nations.

Hurley said he thought the effort to have the United States sell the property was an attempt by some to get "cheap land" and that it had been urged that the Government give the land away because of the criticism.

Porto Rican Lauds Education System

Says U. S. Has Shown Good Faith by Establishing Public Schools.

San Juan, Porto Rico, July 27 (A. P.).—The 33 years of American regime in Porto Rico, marked by the anniversary Saturday of the landing of the first United States soldiers in the island in 1898, can best be judged by the progress of education, says Dr. Jose Padin, commissioner of education.

Dr. Padin cited the establishment of public schools in the island as evidence of the good faith and efforts of the United States for the welfare of the people of Porto Rico.

Since 1898 the number of public school buildings has been increased from none to 2,250, worth more than $10,000,000. The annual budget for public instruction has increased from less than $200,000 to almost $6,000,000. The number of teachers has been increased from 623 to nearly 5,000; the number of pupils from less than 45,000 to 230,000.

Pan-American Building Guides Hit by Editor

(United Press.)

Complaint that guides were charging 5 cents a tourist to explain the sights in the Pan-American Union Building, and then ridiculing some of the customs of South and Central American countries represented there, was made yesterday by Nelson Rounsevell, Panama editor.

Mr. Rounsevell, in a dispatch to his paper, the Panama American, noted that 21 American nations contribute to the union, and that such practices may convince Latin Americans that "Uncle Sam is not only money-mad, but a nickel-grabber as well." Admission to the union building is free.

Panama Entertains Elks.

Panama, Republic of Panama, July 27 (U.P.).—Balboa and Cristobal Elks today entertained 140 United States Elks who have been attending the national convention in Seattle, Wash. The visitors arrived from San Francisco aboard the S. S. California en route to New York. They toured the City of Panama and the Canal Zone and tonight were guests at a reception, banquet and dance at the Miramar Club.

Virgin Isles Plan New Law.

St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, July 27 (U.P.).—An organic act intended to replace the colonial law effective here since 1906 is to be drafted by committees of the two colonial councils named today. The act will be submitted to Secretary of Interior Wilbur and the United States Congress for approval.

Lima Papers to Print Again.

Lima, Peru, July 27 (U.P.).—The government suspension of the Socialist newspapers La Vanguardia and Diario Socialista Independiente, imposed last week because they printed articles allegedly undermining public confidence, was lifted today.

Bankers Save Nations While Statesmen Talk

By JOHN J. DALY

THIS is no tale of a tub.

While visiting statesmen were being entertained in the American Embassy at Berlin, a group of wiseacres got the bankers together.

Representatives of the Reichsbank and other members of the financial fraternity then announced the establishment of an Acceptance and Guarantee Bank. It will save Germany and the world by restoring unhampered currency circulation.

In other words, they called the fire department to put out the fire.

All is well.

The world begins to look rosier.

As the old song had it, "A Man's Best Friend Is His Banker." Since a nation is nothing more than a family grown large, the bankers of the nation are its best friends, after all.

Whatever the German expression for it, Everything is Jake! The bankers have consulted and the situation is well in hand.

While statesmen were chasing all over Europe, attending banquets, luncheons and conferences, here, there and yon, in Paris, London and on the Riviera, the Berlin bankers were standing pat, or sitting bull, awaiting the final call—the summons that had to come. Somebody must pay the hotel bills.

From time immemorable, bankers have brought home the bacon. From the year the Goths overran Greece to the goose-stepping days of the kaiser's minions, marching through Belgium, bankers have been the power behind the throne, and the throwin'.

IN the old plays, melodramas of a bygone period, the banker was usually the villain. He threw the good folk out of their homestead, foreclosing the first mortgage. Playwrights were unjust to the bankers. It may have seemed cruel to take the farm away from the farmer who failed to meet his interest payments, but it made for good government; sound banking, credit. Mortgages cannot run on forever, collecting dust and no interest. A banker knows what makes the mare go; what makes the wheat grow; what makes nations and men independent. Coin. And it doesn't grow on trees.

When bankers set out to save a country they put statesmen to shame. There is a reason. History shows the strength of the banker. Captains of industry, sages, philosophers, kings, queens, peasants, presidents and politicians, all depend upon the banks. Without banks, no schools or colleges or universities—nothing! No culture. Nations that thrive and grow great have sound banks. Good bankers, not great statesmen, put America out in the front line—and kept it there. Were it not for Rafael Sanchez, banker for Ferdinand, and Isabella, Columbus could not have financed his voyage of discovery. Robert Morris, banker, financed the American Revolution—the first one.

Bankers are the wise men of the world. Let soldiers wear the uniform, march in processions and parades, wave the flags, shoot the salutes—and the world. Bankers sit contentedly in the counting rooms knowing full well that some day the committees that arranged these affairs will call upon them, and monied men. After the dance the piper must be paid.

So the German bankers have their inning, just as the bankers of Chile must soon have theirs. It is reported upon reliable authority that the main trouble down in the South American country comes from the suspension of payments on credits. That is something no banker would permit. It looks like the handiwork of statesmen.

When bankers get back in control, all these things will right themselves—in Chile and in Chicago.

A BANKER studies his business from the ground up. He takes great interest in it. He starts as a boy—preferably a messenger—and works to the top; to the presidency of the bank. There is no better method.

A statesman may have been a politician before he got into the chancery. His honors, usually, are thrust upon him. The qualifications for office are not set down in the governing books. No man needs prove he is a statesman. All he has to do is point to a sign on the door: Office of the Secretary of the Inner Workings. He is Mr. Secretary. How he got that way is nobody's business. He may have delivered thirty or forty thousand votes in an election; or, have had a lot of money; or, a friend at court; or, he may have been a schoolmate of another statesman.

Trust not the statesman, in the final analysis. Rather, take off your hat to the banker.

A statesman may get a nation into trouble, but always it is the banker who puts it back, and keeps it on its feet. Princes and kings are great when they are in their counting rooms with their bankers.

An eternal babble of tongues surrounds statesmanship. Bankers gather and immediately start figuring it out with paper and pencils.

"What a sottish and stupid people they are," says Socrates, "who, without sense or understanding, make no account either of finances or poetry, and trust themselves to statesmen who study only the genealogies and successions of kings, the foundations, rises and declensions of states, and such tales of a tub."

The fate of the world shifts from one to the other, the banker and the statesmen, international jugglers.

dication of the throne of Spain. The boy was brought to England by his father, and it was said at the time that the former king's hope for the future seemed to be centered in his youngest son. The boy is 17 years old.

Fred Bowen, secretary to the Duke of Miranda, who was private secretary to the former king, was quoted as saying, after Alfonso took Don Juan to England, that he had been told the boy was the one in whose favor the former king wished to abdicate. Physical disqualifications, he said, of the two elder princes made Don Juan the prospective heir.

"Prince Juan is a quiet, intelligent boy and very modest," he said. "He is slim, tall and dark, like his father, and looks much like him. He has a large nose, and the Hapsburg lip is less in evidence than in the case of the former king."

or even pure cussedness, may overturn the whole of the existing state of affairs.

"And it so happens that the order in which the successive votes are taken for the organization of the Senate lends itself enticingly to produce such a result."

In other words, the Senate votes first upon its president pro tempore, and should Senator Moses be eliminated by his Republican colleagues in favor of the Democratic candidate, he simply proposes, through the narrow division between the parties, to throw his vote and eject from the chairmanship of certain committees those Republicans who voted to overthrow him.

The Democrats, on organization, will vote as a unit for their nominees, but they expect the Republicans to do likewise. The Republicans, while of varying hues and beliefs, usually vote together on organization for self-preservation.

But there have been rumors that Senator Nye, of North Dakota, and others would do away with Senator Moses and vote, instead, for the Democratic nominee for president pro tempore—Senator Pittman, of Nevada.

So Mr. Moses has sent word that there are two sides to such a proposition and that he and some of his friends will retaliate by voting to make Democrats chairmen of committees headed by the insurgents who vote against him.

It was Senator Moses who put into the Senate record the expense account of the campaign funds investigating committee headed by Senator Nye. He also referred to the Republican independents as the "sons of the wild jackasses." Neither Senator Moses nor any other senator made any complaint about the account, but the incident rankled Senator Nye, who questioned the propriety of the action.

With Republican control of the next Congress jeopardized in both branches, the Republican leaders are intent on the situation. Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, and Senator McNary, of Oregon, assistant leader and chairman of the committee on committees, are being looked to by the regulars to bring about a settlement of the matter.

In the closely divided House, Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, the Republican floor leader, and Representative Snell, of New York, chairman of the rules committee, are in a desperate contest for the Republican nominatoin for the Speakership, left vacant by the death of Representative Longworth, of Ohio. The independents threaten to place a nominee in the race, which may result in the Democrats organizing the House with Representative Garner, of Texas, as Speakeer.

New Method Is Successful In Reducing Maternity Pain

Pernocton, Drug Developed in Germany, Used at New York Hospital With Results Similar to Twilight Sleep, But Without Dangers.

New York, July 27 (U.P.).—A new method of reducing maternity pains has been developed successfully by obstetricians of the Sloane Hospital for Women the New York Herald Tribune will say tomorrow.

The method involves injections of a drug known as pernocton and has been found to be safe for both mother and child. In this respect it is considered a great improvement over methods which heretofore have been advanced and gradually rejected because of deleterious after-effects.

The idea is not original with the Sloane Hospital specialists, although they have done much to work out a safe method of administering it. Pernocton was first used in Germany. Physicians of the Sloane Hospital began experimenting with it four years ago, but proceeded with utmost caution because of experiences with previous pain-reducing methods which were not altogether satisfactory.

It was said the pernocton method does not entirely eliminate pain, but that the mother does not remember her pain. Its effect is similar to that of twilight sleep. It does not subject either mother or child to the dangers sometimes encountered in the latter, however.

LATIN ARTISTS SING IN OUTDOOR SETTING

Concert at Pan-American Union Features Mexican and Chilean Singers.

Consuelo Garcia Garza, Mexican lyric soprano appearing for the first time in Washington, and Leopoldo Gutierrez, Chilean baritone, featured the program of the fifty-seventh Latin-American concert at the Pan-American Union last night. The concert was held in the esplanade of the Pan-American Union Building and the setting under the stars was ideal.

The United States Army Band, under the ledership of Capt. William J. Stannard, also shared in the program. The concert was broadcast over Station NAA and the last hour the concert went over the red network of the National Broadcasting System.

Foreign Compositions Sung.

Of beautiful lyric quality the voice of Senorita Garza was heard to good effect last night in a number of selections by Cuban, Mexican and Nicaraguan composers. O of the outstanding numbers was "Querida," by A. Selsmit-Doda, a Mexican composer, which Seonrita Garza sang with native grace and vivid interpretation.

"Ay, Ay, Ay," a Chilean composition by Osman Perez-Freire, gave Senor Gutierrez a chance to display his mellow baritone to good advantage and the audience liked the remainder of his program as well.

The Army Band gave good account of itself in a series of Latin-American compositions, notably a tropical suite, "Una Fiesta Centro Americana," by M. de Adalid y Gamero, of Honduras. John Baumann, of the band personnel, played two marimba solos as his contribution to a really worth-while program.

Diplomats Present.

The concert attracted what is left of the diplomatic and official contingent of the Capital. With many at the seashore or in Europe, the large attendance last night was a distinct compliment to the host of the evening, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union. The presence of Franklin Adams, counselor of the union, who returned but a day or two ago from a trip to Spain, lent an additional happy note to the fete.

Noted at the concert were the Ambassador of Turkey, Mr. Ahmet Muhtar; the Ambassador of Argentina, the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Charles F. Adams; the Minister of Bolivia and Mme. de Medina, the Minister of Nicaragua, Senor Dr. Don Juan B. Sacasa; the Minister of Colombia, Senor Dr. Don Fabro Lozano, and the Minister of Honduras.

Also present were Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Frederick H. Payne, Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Ernest Lee Jahncke, the First Secretary of the Chilean Embassy, Senor Don Blanco Viel; the Charge d'Affaires of Cuba, Senor Don Jose T. Baron; Mr. and Mrs. John Walker Holcombe, Mrs. John Reynolds, who was with her father, Mr. Howard Reeside; Mrs. Thomas D. Thatcher, Mrs. Wickersham, of Alaska; Miss Mabel Hogan, Mr. and Mrs. Carter Field and Miss Elena Calderon.

ZEPPELIN REACHES FRANZ JOSEF LAND

Home Port and Moscow Learn of Dirigible's Progress North.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, July 27 (A.P.).—The Graf Zeppelin reached Franz Josef Land at 11:45 p. m. Berlin time (5:45 p. m. Eastern standard time) tonight according to advices received here.

Moscow, July 27 (A.P.).—Reports received here at 10 o'clock tonight said that the dirigible Graf Zeppelin was nearing the southern extremity of Franz Josef Land and preparing to meet the icebreaker Maligin.

The Maligin is anchored near Cape Flora, Franz Josef Land. It informed the geophysical station here by radio today it had made preparations to meet the Graf when it reaches that point in its Arctic course.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, July 27 (U.P.).—The dirigible Graf Zeppelin, making a six-day exploration and scientific flight over the Arctic, sailed northward into the polar regions today in the region of Nova Zembla Land, which lies north of Siberia.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander, reported by radio to the Friedrichshafen base that the ship was over the Barents Sea, west of Nova Zembla and on the route to Franz Joseph Land.

"Our position at 1 p. m. central European time was 75.50 north 48.20 east," the message said. The position is about 1,000 miles from the North Pole.

The dirigible, carrying scientists of America, Germany and Russia, expects to make contact with Russian scientific expeditions now in the Arctic.

Hoover Debt Plans Called Key Moves

Julius Klein Says Fear in Trade Was Banished by Chief's Acts.

(United Press.)

President Hoover in his debt-holiday and German credit moves "rightly picked the situation which represents the key-log in the world's economic jam," Assistant Secretary of Commerce Julius Klein said in a radio speech last night.

Mr. Klein said a large proportion of the increased prices for commodities and securities, resulting from those moves, has been retained. He said the "dominance of fear" has been the factor retarding economic recovery, and the President's actions have lifted the influence of fear from one great domain of world interest.

"Now that panic has been effectively arrested, the prospect is by no means discouraging," he said, after commenting that this is not a German crisis, but one affecting this country vitally.

Germany Asks for List Of Amounts Due Abroad

Berlin, July 27 (A.P.).—President Von Hindenburg today signed an emergency decree authorizing the Government to order all persons or corporations domiciled in Germany, and all individual German States, owing money abroad, to notify a special government department in Berlin of the amount of all such indebtednesses exceeding 50,000 marks (about $12,500).

Col. Moss Is Enthusiastic Over Friendship Pilgrimage

President General of Flag Association Points to Receptions Abroad and Expressions of Good Will as Indicative of Fruitful Results.

Profoundly impressed with the reception accorded the United States Flag Association's "Envoys of Friendship" by the people of Great Britain and France, and the consequent possibilities for effecting permanent world peace through the establishment of lasting friendships among the children of the world, Col. James A. Moss, president general of the Flag Association, returned to Washington yesterday. The eleven boys and girls who acted as "envoys" were placed on the train at New York and started on their homeward trips to the four quarters of the United States.

"I am thoroughly convinced that the idea launched by the United States Flag Association for the building of permanent peace through the establishment of friendly relations among the children of today, who will be the world rulers of tomorrow, is entirely feasible," Col. Moss said.

"The day before we left Paris Mario Roustan, the minister of public instruction, assured me that a group of children selected from the public schools of France, would return our good-will visit this coming year, and, if possible, he would himself come with them. Also, from talks I had with several people in London there is every reason to believe that a group of British children will return the visit to England. It is planned to extend to other countries the annual exchange of these youth good-will visits. Indeed, it looks very much as if we have really started something."

Coming back on the boat, Col. Moss said the "envoys," from many sections of the country, collaborated on a joint statement, to be issued as coming from all of them. Each contributed to the statement and each approved the statement as a whole when completed. The "envoys" were Miss Dorothy Skirm, Miss Helen Detweiler, Miss Helen Catherine DuBois and Thomas Hayes 3d, of Washington, D. C.; Miss Sonia Schulberg, of Los Angeles, Calif.; Miss Ruth Eldridge, of San Antonio, Tex.; Miss Florence Burrows, of New York City; Ward Stone, of Portland, Oreg.; John Nixon, of Rochester, N. Y.; John N. McDuffee, of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Charles C. Holbrook, of College Park, Md. The joint statement, in part, follows:

Our good-will trip to France and England was wonderful. It all seems like a beautiful dream come true—crossing and recrossing the Atlantic on fine ships; seeing all kinds of new and interesting things; being received by some of the most outstanding figures of the world, including the Prince of Wales, Prime Minister MacDonald, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Mayor of London, the President of France and Mr. Briand.

We met many British and French boys and girls at teas, dances and good-will meetings. We liked them, and they liked us. We danced and had fun together and talked about our studies and other things. We got along beautifully. We found we were very much alike. We both thought that war was an awful, terrible thing and should be abolished and we agreed that when we became men and women and had a voice in our governments we would do all we could to settle at the conference table any disputes that might arise between our countries.

We are sure that if the boys and girls of today in whose hands will be the world of tomorrow could only get to know one another better, they would become such good friends that when they grew up the killing of one another in war would be unthinkable.

Our experiences in Europe have given us a spirit of tolerance and understanding toward the people of other countries which we did not have before. This good-will trip has taught us that the only patriotism worthy of the name is rational patriotism—that is, patriotism that combines with the love of one's country respect, fairness and justice toward other countries. This is why we say we have returned to America better Americans than when we left.

Col. Moss was presented with a beautiful bouquet of flowers by the "envoys" as a token of appreciation for his efforts in arranging the trip and their entertainment.

Quoting from Angelo Patri

"A lot of the heat we suffer from is born in our minds," says Angelo Patri, the famous educator and author. "The house ought to suggest coolness. The sight of a carpet or rug on a warm evening will send my temperature soaring, while the sight of a chair covered in sea-green chintz makes me feel as cool as a green frog on a mossy bank. The clink of ice in a glass brings a feeling of refreshing coolness."

CLAIMS ON MEXICO PLACED IN JEOPARDY

Castle Announces Neilsen Will Resign From Board but Doubt Exists.

By J. B. McDONNELL.

Hundreds of millions of dollars in claims of Americans for injury done them by Mexican citizens in Mexico may be wiped out of legal existence as a result of the negotiations which the State Department is conducting with Mexico anent renewal of the treaty which provides for an international commission to settle the claims of the citizens of one country against the other.

Acting Secretary of State Castle announced yesterday that Fred K. Nielsen, American commissioner on the general and special American-Mexican claims commissions, would resign next month.

Asked about the report that he would resign within about a month, Commissioner Nielsen said that he held judicial appointments from the President and did not consider it proper to discuss a resignation that had not been tendered to the President.

Resignation Not Intended.

He said that naturally he would not resign while any work in American-Mexican arbitration required his personal attention. He was appointed arbitrator in the arbitration with Egypt in the middle of last June by President Hoover.

To phrase the matter more succinctly than did Mr. Castle or Commissioner Nielsen it can be said that Commissioner Nielsen has not resigned and does not intend to resign, and when he does resign he will send his resignation to President Hoover, who appointed him. Although from that should not be drawn any conclusion that there is any enmity between Mr. Castle and Commissioner Nielsen, both of whom would like to have the whole matter removed from the pages of the newspapers, one for one reason perhaps and one for another.

Against their desire, however, lies the fact that hundreds of millions of dollars in American claims are jeopardized by the pending negotiations. The arbitration treaty has expired and twice has been renewed for two years. It expires again at the end of August. Negotiations are going forward for its renewal. What will be the outcome is problematical.

Mexico's Point Seems Won.

Mexico, apparently, is not especially anxious to renew the treaty and has laid down several conditions. Mexican newspapers have said that Commissioner Neilsen is persona non grata. Acting Secretary of State Castle's statement to newspaper reporters yesterday would indicate that already the administration has yielded on the first of Mexico's objections.

Figures obtained from C. C. Bouve, American agent of the Claims Commissions, show that only 137 American claims have been decided in the whole history of the General Claims Commission. The Special Claims Commission considers claims arising out of damages incident to Mexican revolutions. The General Commission considers all others.

In those 137 cases the damaged parties claimed $6,363,000 and $2,600,000 was awarded plus interest amounting to $738,754. There are more than 100 cases which have passed through all preliminaries and have been put on the trial calendar of the General Commission which may never meet again unless the United States renews the treaty under which it was created.

Origin of Claims.

Other claims have been filed before the Special Commission. These number 3,176 and call for a total of $421,300,000. There are duplications in the filing of the claims, due to the anxiety of claimants to protect their interest against legal technicalities, so that, according to figures supplied by Mr. Bouve, the net number of claims before the joint commissions number 4,798, and call for the payment of $675,737,000 by the Mexican government to American citizens.

Mexican claims filed with the General Commission, Mr. Bouve's figures showed, numbered 836. The total amount claimed in these claims was $245,158,000. The commission has decided nine claims, awarding $39,000 out of $309,216 claimed. These claims include damages said to have been sustained incident to the occupation of Vera Cruz, the Pershing punitive expedition, activities of the border patrol, but mostly they are land claims.

FOLLIES GIRL DIES OF BURNS

the beautiful Ziegfeld Follies girl, who died yesterday of burns received Sunday when explosion and fire destroyed Harry Richman's yacht, on which she was a guest.

PLEA FOR GANGSTER IS LAID TO OFFICIAL

Clarence Buck, Appointed to Revenue Post, Attacked in Protest.

Chicago, July 27 (A.P.).—The Daily News said today it had been informed by Clarence P. Buck, of Monmouth, appointed by President Hoover to be Internal Revenue Collector for Northern Illinois, that he once interceded at the request of a friend with a Federal judge on behalf of a notorious Chicago gangster. Buck said he did not know the gangster and was not a paid attorney. Reports from Washington said his action, however, had brought a protest against the appointment to the White House.

Buck announced recently he did not want the position and never intended to take it. Shortly after he had talked with the News by telephone, it was said he had left for a month's trip to Minnesota.

A friend of long standing asked him to help arrange a continuance of a trial of Jack Guzik, business manager for "Scarface Al" Capone, on a charge on income tax evasion before District Judge Charles E. Woodward here, the newspaper quoted Buck as saying. Buck asked the judge for the continuance, but none was allowed. Guzik was convicted and sentenced last December 30 to serve five years in Federal Penitentiary and pay $17,500 in fines.

Buck's appointment to succeed Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blackidge, who resigned after the notorious alleged swindle of $50,000 in Springfield, Ill., last December, was announced by the White House last April 4. Buck had not been sworn in. He was proposed by Senator Otis F. Glen. No one has been named to take his place.

'FOLLIES' GIRL DIES AFTER YACHT BLAST

Helen Walsh Succumbs to Burns Suffered on Richman Boat.

Greenport, N. Y., July 27 (A.P.).—Miss Helen Walsh, Ziegfeld Follies chorus girl, guest aboard Harry Richman's yacht when an explosion sank it yesterday, died in the Eastern Long Island Hospital tonight.

Richman and Mark Hellinger, newspaper columnist, risked their own lives yesterday trying to save Miss Walsh. Hellinger rushed into the cabin where the rest of the yachting party had been seated when the explosion occurred and found the actress buried under a flaming mattress.

As Hellinger threw the mattress out of a hatch, Richman grabbed Miss Walsh in his arms and jumped with her into the water. The quick action extinguished the young woman's flaming clothing, but she already had been seriously burned on the face, arms and body and much of her hair had been burned off.

Gladys Glad, wife of Hellinger and Virginia Biddle, who are also in the Follies, were still in the hospital tonight. Miss Glad was suffering from shock and Miss Biddle from burns which physicians said were not serious.

Richman and Hellinger returned to New York today.

Miss Walsh was the daughter of Mrs. Margaret Walsh, who was with her at the hospital today. She was 21 years old and lived with her mother and her sister Marian. She was born and educated in New York and had been on the stage since 1927.

The news of Miss Walsh's death was kept from Richman, who appeared as usual on the stage tonight, despite his injuries. He told the audience that Miss Glad would not appear "because she was staying with her friend Miss Walsh at the hospital."

Much Litigated Claim of Lowell and Dunmore Upheld.

(Associated Press.)

The patent had been in litigation for eight years and the Lowell and Dunmore claim was upheld in an infringement suit against the Radio Corporation of America in the United States District Court for Delaware.

Holders of the patent claim it was responsible for the discarding of battery-receiving sets.

U. S. ORDERS REPORT ON MURDER OF COED

Indian Official Asserts He Tried to Dissuade Victim in Apache Venture.

(Associated Press.)

Commissioner Rhoads, of the Indian Bureau, yesterday divulged he had ordered a complete report on the disappearance and slaying of Henrietta Schmerler on the White River Apache Reservation in Arizona.

Although Rhoads said he knew nothing of the girl student's plan to live among the Apaches, one official of the bureau said he had attempted to dissuade her from the idea while she was aboard a train en route to the West in June.

When reports of her disappearance were received Rhoads wired the reservation superintendent to push a search and then news came that the 23-year-old girl had been found dead.

James M. Stewart, of the Indian Bureau's land section, told yesterday how the young Columbia anthropological student had revealed her plan to him on the train. He had been talking to a train acquaintance, he said, when Miss Schmerler introduced herself and told how she intended to study the life and customs of the Apaches.

Sought to Dissuade Girl.

Stewart said he was aghast at the daring of the girl, and sought to dissuade her, insisting that at least she get in touch with reservation authorities before settling among the Indians.

She told him, Stewart said, that she intended to leave white civilization behind, to adopt native dress and if possible make her home with an Indian family in order to establish confidence and break down reserve.

Miss Schmerler impressed him as a sturdy, capable and extremely intelligent woman, but she admitted she lacked personal experience with the Indians and knowledge of the life she was entering. Unable to persuade her to abandon the plan, Stewart continued on his way and was returning to Washington when news of her death arrived.

The Indian Office does not know to what extent she established contact with the reservation authorities, but officials pointed out her scheme required abandoning any protection from the whites. Research workers frequently ask for cooperation, but as official supervision probably would defeat their investigations, little protection can be given.

Indian Office records show the White River Apaches have been law-abiding in recent years, with but few major crimes on the reservation.

No Suspects Now Held.

White River Apache Reservation, Ariz., July 27 (A.P.).—The taciturn Apache, nearly as silent as the pine-clad White Mountains, among which the body of Henrietta Schmerler was found, continued today to mystify officers seeking a solution of the killing of the 23-year-old Columbia University anthropology student.

"The Indians seem to be just as interested as we are to learn who killed Miss Schmerler," William Donner, white boss of the reservation, said, "but they have given us no information. We haven't found a thing."

With more than a week passed since the time physicians fixed for the slaying, not a suspect was held. Miss Schmerler was found on Friday in a ravine back of a cemetery, garbed in the dancing dress of an Apache girl. She had been attacked and then stabbed. Physicians said she had been slain about Saturday night, July 18.

Governor Denies Action on Hudson

State Humiliation Seen in Efforts to Force Bigamy Trial.

Olympia, Wash., July 27 (A.P.).—Gov. Roland H. Hartley today declined to extradite Guy Edward Hudson from Los Angeles to face bigamy charges for his marriage in Longview a month ago to Mrs. Minnie "Ma" Kennedy, saying he thus spared the State "further humiliation at the hands of these careless performers."

Prosecutor Cecil C. Hallin, of Cowlitz County, who had sought to return Hudson to Kelso, the county seat, declared he had gone as far as he could in the matter and Hudson would be tried only if he returned voluntarily.

Countess de Argentau Estate Hearing Delayed

Tampa, Fla., July 27 (A.P.).—Hearing was postponed today on the application by Jean R. Van Blinck, Netherlands Consul, for appointment as administrator of the estate of Countess Merci de Argentau, who died here in 1925.

to do something for her. She wanted us to circulate her book, 'The Aristocracy of Health.'"

Asked whether the college would act to circulate the book should the wealth of the Henderson estate finally devolve to it, Dr. Kellogg replied:

"We most certainly shall. We have been doing that anyhow, for we have always worked for ideas of race betterment."

Dr. Kellogg pointed out that he had never asked Mrs. Henderson to do anything for the college, and that whatever she gave through her will was given through her own volition.

Under the terms of the dowager's will of July 13, 1927, virtually her entire estate was left to the Battle Creek Sanitarium as an endowment for the "spreading of biological ideas." This bequest was later rescinded in the final will she made in 1931, which left the bulk of the estate to Frances and Henry Arnold, a niece and nephew of New York, and which bequeathed Jesse Shima, Japanese secretary, $200,000, half of which was to be in the form of a trust fund.

The codicil filed yesterday stipulates that Dr. Kellogg's college shall remain the residuary legatee as provided in the will of July 13, 1927. Dr. Kellogg, with the late Justice Adolph A. Hoehling, and B. C. Kirkland, of Battle Creek, were named executors.

The college was directed to spend $600 every year to prevent cruelty to animals by the use of steel traps.

The only change worthy of note was the naming of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., as trustee for the $100,000 left Mrs. Henderson's niece, Frances Arnold. The income was to go to Augusta Arnold, the daughter of Henry Arnold, her nephew, after the death of the niece. Under its terms, the bequest to Justice Hoehling, which had been cut to $5,000 in a former will, was restored to $10,000.

H. Prescott Gatley, attorney for Mrs. Beatrice Henderson Wholean, foster granddaughter of Mrs. Henderson, who was disinherited in the later wills of the senator's widow, denied yesterday that he had planned any action against any of the wills.

He declared that he still had not discussed the matter with Mrs. Wholean in any way and added, "Why, I haven't even read a one of the wills. I have heard nothing from Mrs. Wholean."

George Edelin, named executor of the estate, in the will filed last April, had taken no action yesterday to petition the court for admission of the final testament to probate. He had indicated that he would take this action sometime this week.

A move to probate this will is expected to unleash the pent up battle which is expected to break out among the various parties who hope to share in the great wealth piled up by the Henderson family through two generations.

Sunday was a glorious day for motoring, so Cynthia and I drove down to see Maud, who lives outside of Winchester. Passing through that historic town—with Sheridan only 40 miles away—we waved greetings to former Gov. Harry Byrd, strolling through his apple orchards as happy as a king on a vacation from his throne.

Cynthia told me that Lady Nancy Astor, who is a great friend of the Harry Byrds, is for the former governor as Democratic candidate for the Presidency in 1932, and is even now laying plans to put over her candidate. It is somewhat of a puzzle to know how she is going to vote the British parliament in an American election, but trust Nancy. She wants what she wants when she wants it and usually gets it, too. Perhaps she is using her Christian Science on the problem, absent treatments, &c. Lady Nancy is a devout scientist and often slips away from the House of Commons to a quaint little Christian Science Church hard by and then comes back refreshed for more battles with the horrid Conservatives. She is coming to Washington this autumn.

A FRIEND of mine who shares my admiration for Mrs. Coolidge met me at a filling station. We smiled together over the thought of Mrs. Coolidge getting her heart's desire at last and having her hair bobbed. I remember one night at the White House—the Stearns were there, of course—we talked about bobbed hair, and Mrs. Coolidge gazed—without comment—at my boyish bob.

After dinner we followed him upstairs to see him feed the cat a dish of tea he carried from the table for her. His ways were so different from those of Mr. Harding. Mrs. Harding told my aunt about President Harding slipping out of the White House and going to fires. He put on a checkered cap and went to the Knickerbocker disaster, and no one recognized him among the rescuers.

So the new divorce may be followed by a remarriage. Who knows?

94 OBTAIN DIVORCES IN RENO IN ONE DAY

John R. Buchanan, of This City, Among Plaintiffs in Social Register.

Reno, Nev., July 27 (A.P.).—Three social registerites, the daughter of a Los Angeles banker, and Baron Steven von Clumberg Steg, who carries credentials styling himself western representative of the Austrian monarchist party, led the parade of the unhappily wedded into the Reno divorce courts today. Ninety-four decrees were granted by the two district judges.

Baron Steg, who has been here on an asserted quest for an heir to the Austrian throne, divorced the woman he married in Vienna in 1923. He charged cruelty.

Lucille Hellman Meyberg, daughter of Maurice S. Hellman, Los Angeles banker, obtained a divorce from Leonard J. Meyberg on grounds of cruelty. She charged he struck her, kept company with another woman and was "inordinately jealous."

John R. Buchanan, listed in the Washington (D. C.) social register, charged cruelty in divorcing Ruth L. Buchanan. They married January 15, 1916, and have three children. Mrs. Buchanan is at Warrenton, Va.

Emily Wheelock Fairfax deserted him in March of this year, Hamilton Van Rensselaer Fairfax charged in winning a decree. They are New York social registerites.

The former Elizabeth Stackhouse got a divorce from George B. Moffat by charging cruelty. They are prominent socially in New York and have two children. A property settlement was made out of court.

Conviction of a felony in New York cost Harold Russell Ryder, former head of a New York financial concern, his wife in Judge Benjamin F. Curler's court. The former Rhoma Woody said that Ryder, whom she married at Patchogue, N. Y., in 1928, is serving three years for grand larceny.

Mann Act Charge Is Filed by Wife

Rich Sportsman Accused of Lavishing Money on Other Women.

West Palm Beach, Fla., July 27 (A.P.).—An amended bill of complaint charging violation of the Mann act was filed here today against Victor Searles, wealthy sportsman of Palm Beach, New York, and Atlantic City, by his wife, Mrs. Mabel Margaret Searles, who is seeking separate maintenance.

Mrs. Searles accuses her husband of lavishing thousands of dollars upon other women and willing his property to them, while failing to provide living expenses for her and their 5-year-old daughter, Betty.

"If your honor can find no precedent to intern the said Searles nor to sequestrate his property," the bill recites, "it would then seem that your oratrix's only hopes for protecting herself and her child, as well as protecting the said Searles, would be to furnish the information she has to the Department of Justice and, if possible, procure his conviction and sentence to prison where he may be properly treated and cured of the drink habit."

BRITAIN'S BELIEF IN GERMANY IS EXPRESSED BY MACDONALD

vided for by the London conference are here in Berlin and the machinery is thereby set in motion. The most important fact is that the nations represented at the London conference were able to agree about cooperating about assisting Germany.

"All financial resources must be employed to hold together the structure of civilization. The underlying causes of the present crisis must sooner or later be clearly envisaged and a solution sought with the common sense and good will for which a feeling of mutual confidence is essential.

Confidence Is Personal.

"This confidence has a personal as well as a national aspect. Great Britain and Germany have already done much in this respect and I hope similar future meetings will contribute to a still better mutual understanding.

"Since the end of the London conference many important things have happened. First, I would like to say I appreciate the assistance of France and I wish that the conversations between yourselves and the French statesmen may continue, with the participation of other countries if necessary.

"We must forget the past, seeing that the future depends upon policies conducted by men of good will, animated by a spirit of cooperation enabling them to suppress feelings of alarm and suspicion, which, if they were permitted to exist, would have the direst of consequences, and, finally, lead to war.

English Stress Admitted.

"The thoughts and feelings of the young generations should be turned away from animosity and suspicion and turned toward understanding and helping one another. This is our common task: to direct the idealism of our young generation to our great work of understanding cooperation amid the great nations of the world."

In his welcoming address, Chancellor Bruening said the Germans were mindful also of conditions in England.

"We know you in England are also having a stressful time," he said; "caused to some extent by the crisis in Germany spreading internationally. The loyal cooperation of all nations, and mutual assistance, is the only remedy. The foundation for this was laid in London. Further reconstruction work must begin now.

World Peace Is Purpose.

"Your presence here today is proof that it is your wish to continue the work so happily inaugurated. May it bring world peace!"

In connection with tonight's dinner, a reception was given by the Anglo-German Society in honor of the British guests in which Chancellor Bruening, Foreign Minister Curtius, the British Ambassador, Sir Horace Rumbold, and a number of porminent men in German political and financial life attended.

Berlin today was the center of diplomatic activity in which the friendly hopes and determined efforts of three nations converged on a solution of the acute problem of Germany's distress.

Stimson Sees Hindenburg.

Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, accompanied by Ambassador Frederic M. Sackett, talked for half an hour with President von Hindenburg, then started for Amsterdam by airplane on the way back to London.

Soon afterward Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald stepped off the train from London.

Meanwhile bankers were arriving from several points to confer with German financiers as recommended by the recent seven-power conference at London.

Oliver Sprague, American adviser to the Bank of England, is here; Marcus Wallenberg, a Swedish banker who played an active part in the Dawes plan negotiations, has arrived, and from all parts of Germany the 100 or more members of the central association of German bankers are gathering for a meeting tonight.

Credits, Arms, Interlocked.

All of them probably are thinking of short-term credits and the 1932 disarmament conference—matters which appear on the surface to have little connection with each other, but which nevertheless have woven themselves into the discussions of the past few weeks.

The common people are eager to learn whether all these conferences of statesmen and bankers really will lead the country out of its difficulties, and the cheers for Mr. MacDonald when he arrived today indicated there are many who hope that something positive is in the offing.

Amsterdam, Holland, July 27 (A.P.).—Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson arrived here by airplane from Berlin tonight on his way to London.

Secretary Tired of Politics.

He said he was "tired of politics," and after three or four days in London he intended to "take a good rest." The rest, it was said, would probably be taken in Scotland, although the Secretary himself refused to say where he would go.

He was welcomed on his arrival at the airdrome at Schiphol by C. L. Hoover, American consul; officials of the air line, and newspapermen.

He declined to make any statement about affairs in Germany and left later by motor for The Hague, where he was to take dinner at the American Legation tonight.

He will cross to England from Hook, Holland, to Harwich, and is expected to arrive in London at 8 a. m. tomorrow.

REFORMS IN EFFECT, PRISON CHIEF SAYS

Federal Director Holds Crime Board's Recommendations Already Acted On.

(Associated Press.)

The Wickersham Commission's condemnation of the American prison system was met yesterday by a statement from Sanford Bates, director of Federal prisons, that the Government already had put into effect all the major improvements it suggested.

The commission, in its seventh report to President Hoover, charged that present penal machinery was antiquated and inefficient, and that its brutality was contributing to the increase of crime by hardening prisoners. Almost without exception, however, the prisons it cited as bad examples were State or local institutions.

Bates yesterday reviewed one by one the commission's recommendations that "cruel and inhuman" discipline be banned by law; that fortress-like and unhealthy prisons be superseded; that the insane, diseased and drug-addicted be segregated; that the systems of parole and probation be extended; that idleness within prisons be overcome and that prison officials be especially trained and above politics.

New $3,000,000 Prison.

Bates' answer was that under the reorganized prison program instituted by the Government before last July almost every one of these steps had been or was being made effective.

The Federal prison chief pointed to plans for the new penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., to cost upward of $3,000,000 and designed to relieve overcrowding in other institutions by a total of 1,200 inmates. Plans likewise have been going forward for the new reformatory at El Reno, Okla., designed to hold 1,000 young offenders.

Similarly, he said, progress toward construction is being made upon a huge prison hospital in the Midwest and upon a narcotic farm which will remove addicts from prisons not designed to care for them.

Personnel Called Improved.

Corporal punishment in Federal prisons has been banned, he asserted, while improved personnel is being secured by requiring officials and guards to enter under civil service and to train in a school now in operation.

Sanitary conditions have been improved by placing the supervision of this task under the United States Public Health Service, he added, while under authority of Congress Federal prisoners are now at work on manufacture of goods for other Government departments.

Bates was one of 24 penal experts who signed a report attached to the commission's study, which agreed, in effect, that the penal system had failed in its aim of reforming the criminal and protecting society.

Minnesota Enquiry Ordered.

St. Paul, July 27 (A.P.).—Gov. Floyd B. Olson today ordered investigation of a Wickersham Commission charge that Minnesota prison inmates were treated cruelly. The Wickersham report criticized "barbarous methods of discipline" at the institution, asserting men under punishment were handcuffed to a door during working hours, with the cuffs waist high.

The governor also asked the State Board of Control to determine advisability of abolishing or revising the system under which prisoners must maintain silence. He said he believed this practice "unnecessarily cruel."

At the same time the Board of Control issued a statement saying prison inmates are not treated cruelly as charged.

Conditions Admitted.

Leavenworth, Kans., July 27 (A.P.).—Warden T. B. White, of the Federal Penitentiary here, said today that the prison "is crowded like the Wickersham Law Enforcement Commission report said."

In connection with the commission's recommendation for segregation of hardened and diseased criminals, he pointed out that the Federal Government is building new institutions with that idea in mind. He referred particularly to the authorization of a hospital at Springfield, Mo.

Boston, July 27 (A.P.).—Criticism of the Massachusetts State Prison by the Wickersham Commission today drew no contradictory statement from Dr. A. Warren Stearns, State commissioner of corrections. The Wickersham report classified the Massachusetts institution as among those which were obsolete.

"I offer no defense of obsolete and antiquated methods," Dr. Stearns said. "Recommendations similar to those made by the Wickersham Commission have been made from year to year. I hope the public will be stirred to such a point that it will be willing to accept a modern and adequate system."

Jefferson City, Mo., July 27 (A.P.).—Great improvement in conditions of the Missouri Penitentiary has been made since the survey by the Wickersham Law Enforcement Commission, Gov. H. S. Caulfield said today.

Court May Decide Bush Death Award

Son Seeks Help in Dividing Among 10 Reward for Father's Slayers.

Claims of ten persons to the $1,000 reward offered for arrest and conviction of the murderers of Louis Bush, president of the Gray Line Motor Tours, yesterday were referred to the District Supreme Court by his son. He asked aid of the court in distributing the fund.

The son, William L. Bush, 1417 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, petitioned the court to adjudicate the claims, three by Washington residents, and decide who is entitled to the reward. He was allowed to deposit with the clerk of the court $971, representing the total amount, minus costs of filing the action and service of papers.

Daley Joseph Murphy, 69 L street northeast; Gertrude Murphy, of the same address, and Walter I. Malone, Chastleton Hotel, all claim the reward, according to Mr. Bush. Out-of-town people who have filed claims include Dixon Bonner, Louis Sedler, Sarah L. Sedler, Edward Crowley and John Halluska, of East Pittsburgh, Pa., and Walter Monahan and Thomas Morgan, Pittsburgh.

Penal Report Hits District In One Respect, Peak Says

Superintendent Holds Jail Here Is Merly Antiquated; Asserts Dark Cells and Dungeons Have Been Abolished and Prisoners Given Work.

In only one respect does the District Jail come under the criticism leveled against American penal system by the Wickersham Commission, and that is, that the building is antiquated, according to Lieut. Col. William L. Peak, superintendent of the jail.

To modernize the building, he said, would cost $800,000. Col. Peak believes that the jail should be replaced by a modern structure to be placed in a different location, not adjacent to the municipal hospital.

When Col. Peak first took charge of the jail, he abandoned the use of dark cells and dungeons and devoted the space for linen closets. Bread and water diets, he said, are imposed only in extreme cases of incorrigibility and never for a period of more than 48 hours.

Cells at the jail, he said, are roomier than in other institutions, and the use of handcuffs is resorted to only to prevent prisoners from committing suicide. This form of repression was last invoked more than a year ago, he said.

The prisoners are kept busy working on the grounds of the jail or at Gallinger Hospital. At the jail are accommodations for 600 men, while the daily average is about 460, consequently there is no crowding. The main purpose of the jail is to house prisoners awaiting trial and sentence.

Occoquan Workhouse manages to keep its inmates busy in its brick plant and farm, while the Lorton Reformatory has a foundry, automobile tag plant, a laundry, where all Government linen is laundered, a tailor shop and a large orchard.

RAILWAY WORKERS CONVENE IN CAPITAL

21 Unions Meet in Secret to Study Various Problems of Employment.

(Associated Press.)

Representatives of all organized railroad labor in the United States and Canada met here yesterday to discuss pressing problems, including wages and unemployment.

The deliberations were held secret, but D. B. Robertson, of Cleveland, chairman of the meeting, said the attitude of the railroad workers toward the proposed 15 per cent freight rate increase was on the program, as was railroad consolidation.

The Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, one of the 21 unions represented, recently appealed to the United States Board of Mediation after demands they made in connection with the New York Central's consolidation program were denied.

The merger of the New York Central's offices with those of the Michigan Central and Big Four, the brotherhood said, would throw approximately 155 clerks out of work and would require 858 others to move their families from one city to another.

Robertson declined to comment on whether the wage situation which might develop if the railroads were denied their plea for a rate increase would be discussed. Other officials, however, pointed out that the railroads had almost unanimously taken a stand against cuts in pay scales.

Unofficially, it was said there was growing concern over the number of part-time workers and over prospects for the coming winter. Robertson said he did not consider the three-day session scheduled here an emergency meeting. He said the officials meet yearly or oftener to discuss their problems, and that the time was usually chosen to suit the convenience of those attending.

He said old age and disability pensions occupied an important place on the agenda, as did the five-day week or six-hour working day, without any wage reductions, as an unemployment remedy.

FLIGHT TO ISTANBUL MAY START TODAY

Boardman to Make Another Effort to Break Long-Distance Record.

New York, July 27 (A.P.).—After a conference with Dr. James H. Kimball, meteorologist, Russell Boardman and John Polando today announced they would make a second attempt to take off on their projected nonstop flight to Istanbul, Turkey, from Floyd Bennett Airport at 5 a. m. tomorrow.

They were unsuccessful Friday morning in lifting their heavy plane into the air and were forced to dump their gasoline and return to the field.

Boardman and Polando hope to set a new long-distance flying record to Istanbul, about 5,000 miles from New York.

The long-distance record now is held by the Frenchmen, Coste and Lebrix, who flew 4,912 miles nonstop from Paris into Manchuria.

Hugh Herndon, jr., and Clyde Pangborn, who seek to beat the Post-Gatty round-the-world mark, said they would hop at 4 a. m. They hope to make Moscow without stop, but plan to fly over England and refuel at Croyden Airport if necessary.

CHILDREN ARE SEEN AS PEACE BULWARKS

World Educators Advocate Exchange in Schools to Promote Friendship.

Denver, July 27 (A.P.).—The road to international peace will be blazed by children, speakers told delegates at the opening sessions of the fourth biennial Conference of the World Federation of Education Associations today.

The message came from opposite corners of the earth, being stated by Mrs. A. H. Reeve, Philadelphia, chairman of the home and school department of the conference, and later reiterated by Capt. H. N. Penlington, of Hemsworth, York, England, chairman of the elementary school division. He proposed an international exchange of pupils and teachers.

"Friendship is the only sure foundation for lasting peace," said Mrs. Reeve, "and children are naturally devoid of race prejudice. It is from what adults give them through home conversation, books and the cinema that children acquire consciousness of the differences which separate."

School Exchanges Urged.

Capt. Penlington suggested international good will would be promoted by exchanging primary school children as well as teachers among various countries of the world.

"The most fruitful source of war is fear," he said. "Knowledge destroys fear and creates confidence. I am convinced that constant and free exchange of teachers and pupils between the nations will be the sanest and most certain means of bringing about the peace we desire."

Dean Milton Bennion, of the department of education at the University of Utah, followed the same line of thought in speaking before the division on preparation of teachers.

Capital Well Represented.

Washington is prominently represented as the fourth biennial convention of the World Federation of Education Associations. The convention will continue until Saturday.

Heading the Washington delegation are Miss Selma Borchardt, teacher at Business High School, and Dr. Frances Moon Butts, of the faculty of McKinley High Schcool. Miss Borchardt is a member of the board of directors of the world federation, vice president and legislative representative of the Teachers Union of the District. She also represents the American Federation of Teachers.

Dr. Butts is chairman of the international committee on commercial education. She is also a prominent member of the District Teachers Union and the League of American Pen Women.

Bookseller Sues Howard University

Injunction and Damages Are Asked in Alleged Unfair Practice.

A petition for injunction and damages was filed yesterday in the District Supreme Court by Joseph E. Maxwell, 2018 Georgia avenue northwest, a bookseller, against Howard University and various officers and trustees thereof, and against the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of the Interior, alleging operation of a cooperative book store at the university in unfair competition.

The book store, in the basement of one of the university buildings, at 2401 Sixth street northwest, was alleged to have used during the entire period of its operation, from 1929 until the present, United States Government light, heat, power, telephone, janitor service, bookkeepers and watchmen, paid by the university out of congressional appropriations in which there is no provision for nor recognition of the existence or conduct of a bookstore.

This activity, insofar as it involved private gain, it was alleged, is precluded by the act of Congress incorporating the university. Unfairness of the competition was indicated by Maxwell's statement that information as to texts to be used is given in advance to the university book store, but withheld from the complainant, and the books are changed from year to year so that Maxwell is thereby prevented from securing an advance supply.

Officials of the Hudson Motor Car Co. stated that the nomination of the reorganized Lambert organization to the distributorship was based upon its outstanding business record and reputation for superior service and fair dealing.

"Washington is an important territory," said W. R. Tracy, sales manager of the Hudson Co., in commenting on the appointment," and we were compelled to move slowly in making our selection. Lambert-Hudson Motors Co., with its past record of achievement, measures up to the high standards which the Hudson distributing organization has established throughout the country, and we are proud to have the Lambert-Hudson Motors Co. represent us in Washington.

SACK YIELDS BONES, BELIEVED BASSETT'S

Mystery of Navy War Flier's Death May Be Solved by Grewsome Find.

Special to The Washington Post.

Everett, Wash., July 27.—A sack of human bones, found in the waters of Edmunds, today led officers to believe they possibly had discovered the remains of James Eugene Bassett, naval war flier, who disappeared here in September, 1926, while en route from his home in Maryland to Manila.

Numerous searches have been conducted for Bassett's body, and several times when bodies have been found authorities hoped that the mystery had been ended.

The bones apparently had been immersed in acid or quicklime, according to Dr. H. H. Kretzler, of Edmunds. A mysterious oval agate and a small brass knob which may prove to be identifying clews also were in the sack.

The bones were found offshore from a region that was carefully searched for Bassett's body, and within a few miles of the "little brown house" in which evidences of murder were found shortly after Bassett disappeared.

Decasto Earl Mayer is serving a life sentence in the State prison and his mother, Mary Eleanor Smith, is serving a five to eight year sentence as a result of the murder mystery.

They both denied knowledge of any murder, but were found guilty of robbing Bassett when his watch, cuff links and other articles were discovered in their possession. Officials learned that they had occupied the "little brown house" in which the murder evidence was apparent.

Arkansas Moves to Get Custody of Killer

Asheville, N. C., July 27 (A.P.).—C. Rex King, charged with the double murder of two North Carolina youths near Marion, Ark., nine months ago, remained in jail here tonight while authorities awaited word from Arkansas as to the next move in the case.

Meanwhile, Gov. Parnell of Arkansas issued a requisition for the return of King to stand trial for the deaths of Burton Henley and Woodrow Wilson, found dying in the embers of a camp fire. Sheriff Howard Curlin, of Crittenden County, was quoted in dispatches from Marion today as saying he would wait until photographs of King, now being sent from North Carolina, are identified before ordering the youth brought to Arkansas from Asheville.

Bomber's Swift Plunge Kills 2 Army Aviators

San Antonio, Tex., July 27 (A.P.).—The sudden plunge of a large bombing plane as it approached a landing today at Fort Clark, near Brackettsville, instantly killed two advanced students of the Army Air Corps, Cadet Robert P. Burke, 26, of Dyersburg, Tenn., and Cadet George M. O'Rear, 24, of Jasper, Ala.

Both had been graduated recently from the primary flying school at Brooks Field and were sent to Kelly Field in June for advanced training. The two students, along with a number of fellow cadets in other ships, had been sent on a cross-country training flight to Fort Clark.

Market Discounts Ibanez Overthrow

$700,000,000 Investments Involved; Chile's Bonds Drop in Price.

New York, July 27 (A.P.).—Financial markets received the news of the overthrow of the Ibanez government in Chile calmly today, although Wall street followed the developments intently, since American investments in Chile exceed $700,000,000, and are the largest for any South American country, save Argentina.

A change in the Chilean Government had appeared imminent for several days, and the financial situation there had been largely discounted in the sweeping declines in Chilean bonds which preceded the actual fall of the old government. A moratorium on external debts was declared on July 16, to last until August 1, at least. Wall street is particularly interested in how long the new government may find it necessary to continue the moratorium.

Of the United States' $700,000,000 investment in Chile, less than half, or roughly $300,000,000, is represented by bonds in the hands of American investors. The remainder is in the form of direct investments in Chile by American corporations. The chief American interest in Chile is copper. Important also are nitrates and public utilities.

mer President Ibanez is on his way to Paris.

After turbulent crowds in the streets of Santiago had demanded the president's life last night he left La Moneda Palace at about 4 a. m. in an automobile, followed by four cars of friends, and drove to La Hacienda El Sauce, near Los Andes. There he boarded a train that took him to Argentina.

Pedro Blanquier, who delayed taking the post of minister of finance until today, found it impossible to formulate a new financial plan immediately. He was expected to put forth a plan similar to those made recently when he was premier for eight days.

The foreign debt, the local banking situation and foreign exchange are the first worries of the new government. Unemployment also is to be considered.

Moratorium May Continue.

The government is expected to continue indefinitely a partial moratorium on debts. There was reported to be little money left and the government is especially anxious to maintain exchange.

The political structure must be rebuilt, it was said, before elections can be held, but it was added that the country is in no condition now for immediate elections. The parties would need time to reform before they could present candidates.

Had President Ibanez resigned outright Sunday, saying nothing about leaving Chile, the constitution would have forced elections within 60 days, but since the resignation was qualified the elections can be delayed, especially since Ibanez fled before the Senate could take final action on a permit for him to travel.

It is thought extremely unlikely that any attempt will be made to extradite him.

New Cabinet Formed.

Orderly crowds filled the downtown streets tonight, cheering for Esteban Montero and Blanquier. A new cabinet was formed shortly after Vice President Esteban Montero took the oath of office.

The members are:

Premier and minister of interior, Luis Gutierrez; finance, Pedro Blanquier; foreign affairs, commerce and lands, Carlos Balmaceda; education, Pedro Godoy; industry and agriculture, Francisco Cereceda; war, Gen. Carlos Saez; marine, Admiral Calixto Rogers; welfare, Dr. Soltero del Rio.

The cabinet was sworn in immediately and the new government began functioning.

(Associated Press.)

The State Department was informed yesterday by Ambassador Culbertson in Chile that no American citizens or interests have been affected in any way as far as he could learn by the political upheaval in that country.

The ambassador cabled that there were big crowds in the street in front of the embassy, but there was no particular disorder.

The Commerce Department received word that the Chilean government had declared a four-day commercial moratorium and that banks are closed until July 30.

The dispatch, from Commercial Attache Ackerman at Santiago, was interpreted by observers here as being the only course open in Chile. It said business had been so upset by revolutionary activity that the breathing spell probably would be the best thing possible under the circumstances for American investors.

Slayer of Husband Exonerated.

Chicago, July 27 (A.P.).—A coroner's jury today exonerated Mrs. Elizabeth Harbaugh from blame for the slaying of her husband, who was shot to death on the South Side yesterday after a quarrel over other women. The jury found that Harbaugh was shot as he struggled with his wife for possession of gun with which she had threatened suicide.

MURRAY PUTS GUARD ACROSS FREE BRIDGE

Oklahoma Governor Hears Rumor of Attempt to Close Span.

Oklahoma City, July 27 (A.P.).—The martial lines of Oklahoma's commander in chief, first used to keep motorists from paying their way over the Durant-Denison Toll Bridge, were flung today across the parallel free span he is determined to keep open.

Scenting a rumored attempt again to close the free structure, Gov. William H. Murray, in direct command of his National Guard, ordered militiamen to establish a second martial law zone from the Texas side of the Red River free bridge to a point 1.7 miles north of the Oklahoma bank.

The guardsmen will remain in position before the toll bridge although Murray has instructed them to let anybody cross it who wants to pay the 75-cent levy. So far every motorist has preferred to cross the free span.

Three sentry posts were established this afternoon by the Oklahoma guardsmen on the free bridge, while Gov. Murray continued criticism of a Federal court order signed at Muskogee Saturday restraining interference with toll-bridge travel.

If the court action is upheld, he said, it may mean abolishment of State governments and the setting up of "centralized despotism." Lesser United States courts, he said, might then enjoin the governor and the functions of State government.

Today occupations extended to the Texas side of the bridge because Oklahoma has an interest in the bridge, said Mr. Murray. He also contends old Spanish treaties give Oklahoma jurisdiction over the south bank.

Texas, according to Adjutant Gen. William W. Sterling, was "just laughing off" the new edict. No plans have been made to send Texas Rangers back to the free span, which was opened after a Texas Federal court order restraining its use had been temporarily suspended.

Radiological Clinics Urged To Help in Fight on Cancer

Stockholm Scientist Says Only 10 Per Cent of Sufferers Can Be Aided by Knife, While Remainder Needs Special Treatment.

Paris, July 27 (A.P.).—Prof. Gosta Forsell, of Stockholm, speaking before the third international congress on radiology at the Sorbonne today, declared that "the knife can cure only 10 per cent of cancer victims."

Ninety per cent of cancer sufferers need other treatment, the noted scientist said, and in some of these cases, which would otherwise be without hope, permanent cures are obtained by radiology. These permanent cures may be effective in about 10 per cent of cases, he said, while in another 15 or 20 per cent complete disappearance of symptoms indicating at least a retarding of the disease, is obtainable, and in 50 per cent of all cancer cases radiology is f und helpful.

An operation, he said, is still the favorite method in 12 per cent of cancer cases, but he predicted a decreasing use of the knife. He admitted, however, that radiology is not useful in many cases of internal tumors.

Prof. Forsell advocated the development of radiological clinics in connection with all central hospitals as a method of fighting the disease. Asserting he was basing the advice on his experience in Sweden, he said a radiotherapeutic clinic, with four or five grams of radium and the necessary machines, in the big hospitals, can greatly reduce national cancer mortality.

He advocated intensive propaganda among doctors, dentists and nurses working with local clinics, but less effort to instruct the general public.

Danish Vessel Aground Off Island in Orkneys

Wick, England, July 27 (A.P.).—The Danish steamer Pennsylvania, out of New York for Oslo, was reported aground today southwest of Swona, in the Orkney Islands.

The Pennsylvania, owned by Copenhagen, is a freighter carrying a crew of 32. She sailed from New York July 14 with a general cargo. A cablegram to the agents said the ship was seriously damaged.

Papers Redrawn In Lea Fraud Trial

North Carolina Indictments Rewritten to Remove Legal Questions.

Asheville, N. C., July 27 (A.P.).—A special term of Buncombe Superior Court called to try Luke Lea and three others charged with conspiring to defraud the Central Bank & Trust Co. here of approximately $1,300,000, marked time today while new indictments were returned to avoid legal questions raised against the original ones.

The judge announced that a special venire from another county would be necessary to try the case, and dismissed the regular jurors. The selection of a county from which the special venire will be drawn is expected tomorrow, after numerous motions and the pleadings of the defendants.

Nashville, Tenn., July 27 (A.P.).—Sweeping aside technical objections Justice William L. Cook, of the State Supreme Court, cleared the way today for a conspiracy indictment against Col. Luke Lea and Luke Lea, Jr., to be submitted to the county grand jury despite the regular prosecutor's refusal to act.

The justice's opinion upheld the action of Criminal Judge Charles Gilbert in dispossessing District Attorney General Richard M. Atkinson as prosecutor in this case and appointing Seth Walker in his stead.

CHILE'S REVOLUTION.

Chile escaped the series of revolts that swept Latin American countries two years ago, and it was hoped that this enlightened and substantial republic might find means of settling its discontent by constitutional means. But even Chile has been overcome by the tide of depression and unrest. The governments in each of the A, B, C republics, the "Big Three" of South America, have been overturned by disorderly mobs since the depression began.

President Ibanez, of Chile, now a fugitive from justice, seems temporarily to have been more fortunate than the executives of Argentina and Brazil. But his fate is not yet determined. That Ibanez ruled as a military dictator can not be denied. He seized control of the government in 1927, claiming that the Bolshevist elements had brought the country to the verge of ruin. As premier he balanced the disordered budget, collected back taxes, increased the federal income and with the addition of foreign loans instituted many improvements. In May, 1927, he was overwhelmingly elected president for a six-year term.

Rescuing the country from a financial crisis and inaugurating important developments during the following prosperous years, his iron rule was felt but lightly. But the years of depression brought a great reduction of income to Chile, as to other nations, and Ibanez found himself confronted with a hostile people and another financial crisis. Interest on the public debt alone consumed one-fourth of the national revenue and Chile was forced to default.

Popular discontent against the executive was first openly manifested by the university students, who went on strike, barricaded themselves and demanded the resignation of Ibanez. When they could not be controlled rioting soon spread throughout Santiago. Threats of a general strike, after numerous persons had been killed and injured in street fighting, brought capitulation from the president. He resigned and fled for his life.

This final chapter is not a pleasing picture in the political life of a republic. To see undergraduate students inaugurating a revolution is shocking, yet it is less deplorable than the cowardly action of the Chamber of Deputies. The chamber voted to grant safe conduct from the country to President Ibanez and then, at the insistent clamor of the galleries, reconsidered the vote and reversed it. Ibanez, as a military dictator, may have imposed unjust hardships upon Chile, but the capital's capitulation to mob rule is not an encouraging indication of capacity for democracy.

STUDYING FOR HONORS.

The system of education in most American colleges provides the same work for the dull as for the exceptionally brilliant students. Although undergraduates have a great deal of freedom in the choice of subjects, the pace of progress is held for all at the rate of the average mind.

In a series of addresses on college plans being given at Columbia University Dr. Frank Aydelotte, president of Swarthmore College, discusses this problem. The most serious defect of American collegiate education, he believes, is the system of regimentation by which students are treated as members of a class and not as individuals. There is no incentive for the more gifted to do better than the general run, and thus the highly intellectual students fall short of their possibilities. In order to overcome this defect in the academic system Swarthmore has instituted a plan for studies in specialized fields.

Students who have completed two years of conventional college work have the privilege of volunteering to read for honors instead of taking their degree in the ordinary course. A severe and thorough training is provided for the best and most ambitious students by this method, without holding them back with the majority. Admission to honor work does not depend upon the student's scholastic average. If he wishes to read for honors in a literary subject the fact that he may have failed in mathematics or economics will not prevent him. His sole duty is to master the studies that he undertakes. Attendance at lectures is entirely voluntary. If any of the courses can be of service to him he is free to attend or he may follow his subject individually if he prefers.

The degree of each student's success is determined entirely by his final examination, which is a severe ordeal and is meant to be so. This system, according to college officials, has greatly added to the interest of undergraduates in their academic work. A considerable increase has been noted in the number of students who go on to post-graduate and professional studies. The professors, too, have had to work harder and with increased interest have developed a finer art of teaching.

PRISON DEFECTS.

Severe criticism of penal institutions in the United States was expected from the Commission on Law Enforcement. For the most part prisons are overcrowded, discipline is inadequate, idleness weakens the morale of inmates and constant association with hardened criminals tends to accentuate their unsocial habits. There can be no question that the prison is a sore spot in the law enforcement system.

But when the commission points out that the prison has failed as an educational agency and as a business enterprise, it deals in platitudes. The attitude of the American public toward competition between convict and free labor makes it impossible to consider a prison a business enterprise. Considering the type of material it has to work upon, the prison can hardly be expected to win distinction as an educational institution. A prison is a rendezvous for human failures. They are confined for the protection of society rather than for either educational or business purposes. Some of the defects in the prison system of which the commission complains seem to be inherent from the nature of its function.

Many improvements can be made, of course. Institutions throughout the country should profit from the commission's recommendations as to parole, discipline, segregation, prison labor, &c. Overcrowding can be corrected by paroling the more responsible type of offenders. Supervision of prisoners under parole costs about one-tenth as much as does their maintenance in a prison. But capable parole boards are essential to keep prisoners so released under surveillance and thus direct them away from new crimes.

Segregation of the diseased, the insane, the hardened criminals and the young offenders is absolutely necessary under any program that contemplates rehabilitation of prisoners. Only the more vicious criminals should be incarcerated in fortress-like buildings. A large portion of prison inmates could be housed in buildings of medium and minimum security at much less expense to the States. Many of the problems of segregation and discipline could be solved in this way.

So far as prison labor is concerned, the commission has nothing new to offer. The contract system is condemned. Use of prison labor on public works is advocated, and the State use system, whereby prison products are exchanged between governmental units for their own use, meets with the commission's approval. These methods of employing prisoners are already in use in many States, yet idleness is still a problem. Authorities are not likely to find the report very useful in making prisons "successful business enterprises."

Wages for prisoners might be an incentive to better work, where work is provided, but it might be more advantageous to turn such funds over to the prisoner's dependents or to the persons injured by his crimes. Education is, of course, highly desirable where it can be applied. But most men who are condemned to prison are not very susceptible to education. Training for a trade is usually practical.

When everything possible has been done to rehabilitate offenders against the law there will always remain a considerable group that is beyond reclamation. Society must be protected against this class. Recent riots and prison fires are sufficient to indicate the need for rigid discipline among this class. Some methods of discipline may seem harsh, but they are mild in comparison with the ruthlessness of these supercriminals in dealing with their victims. The public will not sanction any weakening of policy in dealing with this type of criminal.

FRANCE AIDS RAILROADS.

France is taking drastic measures to protect her railways from motor competition. A bill which seems assured of passage through Parliament calls for increased rates and decreased taxation on railroad income, while on the other hand it provides higher taxes on several branches of the motor industry. This legislation is intended to offset to a great extent the deficit of 3,000,000,000 francs estimated for this year by the railroads.

The first half of 1931 has shown receipts 12 per cent below rail earnings for the first six months of last year. This would indicate a severe loss, as even in such prosperous years as 1927 and 1929 the railroads incurred deficits. The present bill is the result of pressure brought to bear, not only by interested shareholders of the five roads that are not entirely government owned, but also from the 700,000 railway workers, who are well organized and make up an important unit in the political system. This "railway bloc" is mainly responsible for transportation legislation.

The new bill would reduce taxes on freight from the present 32.50 per cent to 12 per cent. It would raise passenger rates to an unprecedented high level. On the other hand, a tax is to be placed on commercial highway transportation proportionate to the freight or passengers carried. Other taxes on motor transportation are both direct and indirect. The most important of these is the increase of six francs additional tax per hectolitre of gasoline.

The new tax on gasoline will strike every car owner, who is already paying a high rate for fuel. Current gasoline taxes amount to 300 per cent of the wholesale price. This means that 60 per cent of what the consumer pays for his gasoline goes to the government in taxes. An example of other assessments against motorists is the tax of four cents a pound on inner tubes.

The French motor car industry is alarmed over the prospect of this new legislation. It may prove to be a severe blow to the automobile industry, which has already felt a decline due to the depression.

PAN-AMERICAN HEALTH.

The control of disease in the republics of North and South America has shown a marked improvement due to the efficient efforts of the Pan-American Sanitary Bureau aided by the Office International d'Hygiene Publique of Paris. A report of the year ended June 30 has been issued by the Pan-American Union.

A basis for international agreements to regulate quarantine measures for airplanes is one of the accomplishments of the last year. Ocean vessels are now governed by regulations for the prevention of disease, but the airways are of such recent development that as yet steps have not been taken to arrange similar inspection and quarantine for air passengers. Plans for this control are, therefore, advocated by the sanitary bureau.

Progress is reported in the eradication of plague. Although this disease was reported in Argentina, Ecuador, Peru and the United States in rodents, it is doubtless present in other American republics. At one time plague in Ecuador was an international menace, but that is no longer the case, and in Peru the disease has also been brought under control. The present efforts to exterminate plague from the west coast of South America will be successful within the next few years if present zeal is consistently maintained.

The fact that yellow fever has been traced to the "Aedes aegypti" mosquito has made possible an almost complete extermination of the disease. The entire annihilation of breeding places of mosquitoes is considered of primary importance, as a few isolated cases of yellow fever among monkeys or persons can serve to reinfect an entire district.

Typhus fever was reported in a number of Latin-American republics as well as the United States. New types of this sickness have been discovered and new sectors implicated. Undulant fever continues to be a problem of the United States and it is now definitely established that there are several strains of the disease and that infection from cattle either direct or through milk is not an unusual occurrence. Though many types of illness have remained unchecked, the general trend has been toward improved health conditions throughout this hemisphere.

After strenuous diplomatic labors in Chicago Charlie Dawes has returned to London, where there's nothing doing.

DETROIT AND THE DOLE

From the Los Angeles Times.

Detroit and Los Angeles are so nearly of a size and have so many interests in common that anything that happens there is apt to be interesting here. But every city in the United States must be interested in the experiences of the city by the straits with the dole; and Los Angeles is especially so because there are people here, and even one newspaper, advocating its local establishment. At the last accounting, Detroit municipal expenditures for "welfare relief" had reached the stupendous total of $17,000,000, a drain on the treasury halted only when it was disclosed that a single clerk had stolen $207,000 of the city's money in four months and was about to help himself to $80,000 more.

These disclosures led to others, among them that the population of Detroit has been increasing by leaps and bounds since the election of Mayor Frank Murphy (after the recall of his predecessor) on the platform that "no one shall go hungry in Detroit," but that the accessions were of the unemployed and the unemployable from every city, town and hamlet within reaching distance of the automobile capital, with a vast proportion of plain tramps.

It was also shown that in addition to the frauds perpetrated by clerks, the beneficiaries of the dole fund were defrauding the city on a huge scale. "Millions for distribution," but not one cent for investigation" might well have been the slogan of the city's welfare department. Money, food and clothing were passed out freely without much bothering to find out whether the recipients had any legitimate claim to them, and in many cases to families, several members of which were working and making good money. When investigators came to check up after months of handouts—the city council at last having rebelled against the mayor's continued demands for more money—they met the kind of reception one would expect.

A typical case was an attack upon Mrs. Helen Miller, a welfare worker, and a police officer who accompanied her, by a woman enraged at the investigators for finding that the family had new furniture and a newly acquired expensive radio, though it had been receiving $4.50 and fourteen quarts of milk a week from the welfare department. The woman wielded a knife and was disarmed with difficulty.

Some of the facts were brought to light by investigators appointed by Henry Ford, upon whom Mayor Murphy poured the vials of his wrath by declaring that unemployed men from the Ford plant were among those tasting the city's bounty. A check-up showed that only about 10 per cent of those listed by the city as laid-off Ford employes had ever worked at the Ford factory—a set of facts which proved the unreliability of the city's investigation.

Mayor Murphy, who had been touring the Middle West extolling the virtues of the Detroit plan, and who had appeared before the council with the declaration that what the unemployed needed was "more dole and less auditing," quieted down materially when these things were brought out.

It is plain that the dole works in Detroit just as it works in every place it has ever been tried, and that is as badly as possible. As a device for pauperizing a large number of persons it is extremely efficient; as a method of meeting an unemployment situation and really helping to relieve it, it has about all the defects that any scheme could have. It penalizes taxpayers, shuts off discriminating relief, adds to unemployment and tends to bankrupt the community.

A community whose business is saddled with paying for a dole is trying to swim upstream with a millstone around its neck.

An American President is fortunate if he gets through hard times with any reputation left; in Latin America an executive is lucky to escape from office with his life.

Chile, that escaped the revolutionary epidemic two years ago and lauded her progressive president, has forced him out of office in the most approved mob fashion of neighbor Peru.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

DIFFERENCE OF CHOICE.

He shook his head and sharply said:
"He never walks a garden through,
Knows not delphiniums are blue
And oriental poppies red.
His life is but a strife for bread;
His only thoughts of moneys due."

Of him the other with a sneer
Unto his next door neighbor spake:
"Behold him there with hoe and rake,
Wasting his time and chances here,
Spending the daylight of the year,
Merely a garden patch to make!"

And still a third man from his book
Glanced up and said: "What fools are they
To spend their lives in such a way!
At printed truths they never look.
One glories in a pruning hook,
The other thinks of cash all day!"

Each to his talent and his power
Must let his inner-self expand.
One would the world of trade command,
One finds his joy in bud and flower.
To books a third gives many an hour,
And each the two misunderstand.

Freedom of Speech Doesn't Include the Right to Tell Dirty Stories to Children.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

MENTION the word "censorship" and you arouse the ire of every lover of liberty within hearing.

Any kind of censorship seems at first glance an assault on freedom.

But freedom is for those who can be trusted not to abuse it, and there is universal belief in society's right to protect itself by protecting its weaker members.

No one resented the law that protected America's Indians from the white man's whisky.

No one was offended by the rule that kept minors out of saloons.

No one questions society's wisdom in prohibiting the traffic in narcotics.

The right of the wise to shield a fool from his folly is sound in principle and practice.

The question is, who shall be shielded and who shall do the shielding?

Consider the matter of motion pictures.

The ones to be shielded, quite obviously, are the middle-class young.

These provide the greater part of the cinema's patronage, and these alone are endangered, for experienced middle-age has developed immunity to corruption or long since surrendered to it.

Who shall say whether a motion picture is too evil to be shown?

Here again the answer is obvious.

People quite certain of their own intelligence often hold ridiculous opinions because of their point of view.

As a radical becomes conservative when entrusted with power or wealth, so a cynical young scientist who calls love a biological reaction changes his mind when he meets the right woman.

Unmarried men and women and married ones without children may see no evil in sex pictures, but parents whose sons and daughters are threatened see the truth.

They alone are qualified to judge.

They alone have a right to speak, for they alone have anything at stake.

Those who doubt the cinema's power for evil simply close their eyes to the facts.

Consider the situation in India.

As Americans despise a weakling who cringes before all other men, so the Indian despises a man who can not dominate his wife.

Hollywood pictures, showing how American women rule their husbands, have destroyed the white man's prestige in India.

This is not irresponsible rumor, but a sober report of India's viceroy.

If an influence is great enough to cost Britain an empire, do you question its power to influence the morals of America's youth?

Intelligent censorship might have saved the white man's prestige in India and thus changed the history of the world.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Naturalized Englishman Scoffs at Proposal to Suppress Showing of Cornwallis' Surrender.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Little minds make little men, and those little men do like to make a noise. Always they are the first to make the eagle scream should that noble bird's feathers be in any way disturbed.

We are confronted with a ridiculous uproar as to whether the surrender of Cornwallis to Washington should be given any place in the Yorktown celebration this fall.

The writer is English by birth, upbringing and education. He has always considered himself a good Englishman, and since he has had the honor to become an American citizen he has the added satisfaction of knowing himself to be also a good American. Being also a close observer of the characteristics of his fellows, he appreciates to the full the absurdity of the reason given for the leaving out of the pageant the climax of the whole thing.

It is an intrinsic part of English nature, which can be seen in the everyday life of the schoolboy and which lasts to the end, that he is taught to be a good loser and bear no grudge. Can any one think for a moment that England did not benefit by the success of the Colonials? Most assuredly she did. Would the British Empire be what it is today were it not for the great lesson she learned from that episode? Canada, Australia, Ireland, New Zealand, South Africa would not now be self-governing countries, with India in line for the same, except for that lesson learned.

Therefore, let us not allow any silly notion of offending English sentimentality prevent the inclusion of the surrender in the pageant. It is sure that English men and women would be much more likely to consider its omission an insult to their reason and sense of fairness than to regard its absence as a mark of consideration.

The true Englishman is thorough in all things. He does not like mutilation. He can join in wholeheartedly with our Fourth of July celebration and not feel anything but the highest admiration for those glorious men and women who stood so nobly for the right and gave notice to the world that tyranny, injustice and misrepresentation in national affairs would not be tolerated, and who gave up life itself rather than submit, and even gave up, what meant much more to many of them no doubt, their native land, not from choice, but from the compulsion of circumstances.

While many of us are, like myself, of English descent, let us first of all be true Americans, unwilling to hurt others' feelings if it can be reasonably avoided, but not sissies afraid of telling or showing the truth; and let us refuse to obliterate one of the most telling parts of the story of the gaining of our independence.

Shorter Hours and Five-Day Week Are Advocated as Means of Ending Unemployment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hard times, business depression, and unemployment call for radical readjustments to restore prosperity in this country. Industrial conditions fail to improve, and unless something is done soon we will face a worse winter than last, and be dependent on charity or the dole to alleviate human misery.

The following plan if carried out would result in greatly improved conditions:

1—A six-hour working day, and five work days a week for each worker.

2—Pay based on an hourly schedule, with an increase of 10 per cent per hour.

3—Increase of 10 per cent in the number of workers employed.

By this plan (30 working hours per week for each worker, and an increase of 10 per cent in wages per hour) a decrease of over 20 per cent would be made in payrolls. This would save many concerns from closing or going under, with consequent increase in unemployment. Wages and working time would be adjusted more in accordance with present conditions. The worker would not receive as high a weekly wage. His pay per hour, however, would be increased, and his leisure hours considerably increased. The increase of 10 per cent in the number of workers employed would afford jobs for all, or the vast majority of the unemployed.

BETTER TIMES.

Correspondent Thinks White House Should Be Scientifically Cooled as Example to Rest of Country.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I believe that President Hoover was sincere in turning down the plan for scientific ventilation of the White House and yet mistaken. No doubt Mr. Hoover thought that if others could stand the heat and dust he could and should. I appreciate this in Mr. Hoover. However, if the President had accepted the plan, it would have not only relieved him of many trips out for rest and fresh air, but would have been an example and source of inspiration for the whole world.

Washington is and should be to a greater degree an example for the whole country. Factories using scientific ventilation find that workers are healthier, more efficient and can endure more. Besides they save much time and money in keeping buildings and products clean. I would like to see Washington's public and private buildings use filtered cool, clean air. It means health, comfort, economy and the saving of babies' lives.

SESSION ON SILVER IS OPENED IN IDAHO

Borah, Smoot Hold Meeting With Mine Leaders on Deflation Problem.

Boise, Idaho, July 27 (A.P.).—Two United States senators, whose names have been prominent in international affairs for more than a decade, and a quartet of mining industrialists went into conference here today to seek a solution of the silver question and to discuss other questions involved in world-wide economic conditions.

Senators Reed Smoot, of Utah, and William E. Borah, of Idaho, headed the conference, while others in the group were T. Mont Ferry, of Salt Lake City, president of the American Silver Producers Association; George W. Snyder, president of the George W. Snyder & Sons Mining Co.; Frank B. Cook, of Salt Lake City, member of the International Silver Commission, and J. O. Elion, manager of the Salt Lake City branch of the International Smelting Co.

Both Senator Borah and Senator Smoot expressed the view it would be unwise to announce their proposals for solution of the silver deflation problem. Both recognize it as one of the major factors in the present depression, but it has been agreed, Senator Smoot said, to submit their plans to President Hoover in advance of making them public.

Mr. Smoot described the present economic situation as "serious."

Senator John Thomas, member of the Senate finance committee, was called into the conference this afternoon. As the meeting opened at the home of Senator Borah, Senator Thomas told newspapermen he would advocate a world conference on the silver question as part of a solution of both that problem and the general world economic difficulty.

"No conference should be held, however," he stated, "unless Great Britain is represented, for on Britain's control of the silver question in India hinges part of the solution."

AID ASKED FOR WOMAN IN RUSSIA

Lady Astor Helps Professor's Wife

American-Born Peeress, in Letter to Soviet Agency, Pleads for Release.

Moscow, July 27 (A.P.).—Nancy Lady Astor today placed informally before Soviet officials the cabled request of Prof. Dmitri Krynine, of Yale University, to her and George Bernard Shaw, asking them to interest themselves in the case of his wife, who, he said, had been refused permission to leave Russia.

Lady Astor wrote a letter to an official of the Soviet Literary and Educational Organization, which is acting as host to the British tourists. It was not feasible for her to take action through official channels, she said, inasmuch as she is in Russia only as a visiting foreigner.

She sent the letter just before she and the rest of the party left for a two-day visit to the collective farm near Tombov. Shaw himself has taken no active part in the case, leaving the initiative to Lady Astor.

Al Smith's Choice Reported Secret

Said to Want Wet Plank First Inserted in Democrats' Platform.

New York, July 27 (A.P.).—Newspapers said today that former Gov. Alfred E. Smith has been keeping his presidential choice for next year a secret until he is assured a wet plank will be inserted in the next platform.

Unnamed political friends are quoted as saying that he is with John J. Raskob in the idea of naming a candidate who is willing to run on a dripping wet plank.

Although Mr. Smith has been reticent about himself as a possible choice for the nomination, his friends are quoted as saying he will not run. Mayor Anton J. Cermak of Chicago, after a brief conference with Mr. Smith last week, made the same prediction.

LONDON-PARIS RUSH OF GOLD IS STOPPED

French Bankers' Confidence Is Restored as Fear of Crisis Passes.

Paris, July 27 (A.P.).—Gold shipments from London to Paris had virtually stopped, it was declared tonight at the Bank of France.

The only shipments received today were those of gold purchased Friday and early Saturday.

Restored confidence was given as the cause for the falling off in shipments. Paris bankers with heavy deposits in London, who rushed to buy gold last week, were reported to have ceased buying and the fear that the German crisis would cause one in England no longer was causing uneasiness.

Finance Minister Flandin was reported to have done much toward restoring confidence in the English pound among the big French bankers by urging the bankers to leave gold in England whenever possible.

Further consultations over the gold situation were reported to have taken place this morning between Gov. Moret, of the Bank of France, and representatives of large private banks, following which some gold shipments already arranged from London were canceled.

Airplanes brought 162 ingots of gold, worth $10,000 apiece, from London this morning and, according to law, these were purchased by the Bank of France from private banks which had made the shipments.

New York, July 27 (A.P.).—The stemming of the flow of London gold to Paris was viewed with satisfaction in Wall street banking circles today.

The vast accumulation of the world's gold stock by France and the United States is being regarded with increasing apprehension in international banking circles, where some observers see a real threat to the gold standard as the vehicle of international trade, and fear unsettling agitation for bimetallism.

Loss of Human Lives Feared in Forest Fire

Spokane, Wash., July 27 (A.P.).—Fanned by high winds, the Deer Creek fire in the Pend Oreille and Kootenai forests of Idaho and Montana had swept over 16,000 acres today, destroying many buildings, a band of sheep and possibly had claimed human life.

A. C. Cockrell, assistant supervisor of the Pend Oreille forest, said he had an unconfirmed report that eleven persons were near the sheep camp and that only a woman had been brought out. The fire spread from 160 acres last night, Cockrell said, to 16,000 acres early this afternoon and was raging out of control. More than 500 men recruited throughout the Panhandle of Idaho were fighting it.

Middleburg Man Sued Over Horses' Purchase

New York, July 27 (A.P.).—Gehard M. Dahl filed a motion in Supreme Courte today for permission to examine before trial, Arthur White, of Middleburg, Va., whom he is suing for an accounting of $15,000 which Dahl says he gave White to purchase horses in the British Isles and train in Virginia as hunters.

Dahl claims he and White signed an agreement concerning the purchase of the horses January 17, 1927, under which Dahl advanced $15,000 expenses. He said White purchased six horses in Ireland, one of which was taken by Dahl, but White failed to account for profits received from sale of the other five.

GOLD BAN LAW HITS BUSINESS IN MEXICO

Banks Quote Dollars at High Rates; Silver Is Only Legal Tender.

Mexico City, July 27 (A.P.).—A confused situation prevailed today in banking and business circles following the placing in effect of the new monetary law which retires gold from circulation and leaves silver the only legal tender.

The law, which, together with other measures, is calculated to strengthen the silver peso, became effective this morning upon publication in the Official Gazette.

Its immediate consequence was not determined, but bankers said that within a few days the situation would become clear and more stabilized.

Banks offered to buy dollars at rates varying between 250 and 260 silver pesos for $100. The price quoted for selling dollars was from 20 to 30 pesos higher per hundred dollars.

Most business effected in foreign exchange was temporarily held up. The Bank of Mexico was beginning to redeem its gold bills, paying for them in full in gold coin, and it was understood would reissue them as silver bills until there is time to have an issue of silver bills printed.

The Bank of Mexico was paying 100 per cent on gold deposits, but other banks were paying only 30 per cent in gold, and the rest in silver pending telephone and cable instructions from their home offices and the clearing up of the point as to whether they would be within the law by paying more than 30 per cent in gold.

THE center of attention . . . We all like to bask in the limelight and there is no more certain way to attract a circle of attentive heads than to tell something that must be whispered . . . whispered because it may be unjust and untrue; because the whisperer is not sure of his facts and consequently may jeopardize himself with the law that regulates the right of free speech, to guard the innocent from slanderous injury by "The Whispering Tongue."

"The Whispering TONGUE"

ALL WASHINGTON remembers the recent instance when a sensational "run" was made on deposits in one of the city's most reliable financial institutions. With no shred of authority or basis in fact someone started a chain of "whispered rumors" that constantly was embellished with thoughtless statements until almost universal credence was secured. As soon as the "whispers" became public statements, those in authority were able to assemble definite proof that they were false and to reestablish the confidence merited by a long record of honest and faithful service.

The insidious thing about "The Whispering Tongue" is that it dares not identify itself, nor permit its unsubstantiated utterances to come directly to the attention of those most concerned, and thus the innocent victim is usually the last to hear the charges that have been made against him. Then, when his true situation has been proved, he finds it difficult to reestablish his former position because "The Whispering Tongue" never exercises itself in the cause of truth, and the straightforward, public statement does not have the exciting glamour of the guarded whisper.

Sometimes "The Whispering Tongue" is actuated by the innocuous desire to pose as a privileged confidant in important affairs—more often it is prompted by the base spur of jealousy or fear of a more powerful competitor. How often we hear idle talk that the home affairs of the Blanks are unpleasant, or other scandal that intimates realize is without foundation. Yet, in the business world there is even more idle gossip that Soandso, or such and such a concern, is in a "bad way" financially—The thoughtless or malicious vaporings of "The Whispering Tongue."

In justice to the welfare of ourselves and our community let us guard ourselves against the evils of "The Whispering Tongue." When questionable stories come to our attention let us immediately speak them loudly—have the courage to tell them to those most vitally interested—and reveal the source of our information . . . The citizen or business whose reputation is attacked by "The Whispering Tongue" of slander has recourse to the courts for redress. Enable him to exercise his privilege that the insidious evil of the scandalmonger may be crushed.

There may be loop-holes through which "The Whispering Tongue" can legally flee to safety when charged with misstatements—it can protect itself by innuendo and allegation—but it can not escape the power of public opinion . . . The Washington Post is a newspaper that does not hide behind technicalities in its relations with its readers and advertisers—it makes sure of its facts before disseminating them by word of mouth or through the printed page, and therefore it has gained the respect of the business men and of the thinking population of the community. The Washington Post itself places no credence in the vaporings of "The Whispering Tongue."

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

YESTERDAY in this spot, or possibly one just a bit to the south, mention was made of the fact that both Constance Bennett and her distinguished daddy, Richard, are soon to be seen together in the first film in which they have ever jointly appeared, a Warner Bros. production by the name of "Bought." This, it turns out, is merely the first of thirteen new productions scheduled for early release—beginning August 22, to be exact—to inaugurate the Warner Bros.-First National season of 1931-1932.

Four of the new films, all, of course, full-length features, are sponsored by First National; the remaining nine by Warner Bros. In the order of their release dates, they are, in addition to "Bought:"

"The Star Witness," with Walter Huston, Chic Sale, Frances Starr and Sally Blane, August 22.

"Larceny Lane," with James Cagney and Joan Blondell, August 29.

Richard Barthelmess in "The Last Flight," September 5.

George Arliss in "Alexander Hamilton," September 12. Among Mr. Arliss' many supporting players, Doris Kenyon, June Collyer, Montague Love, John T. Murray and Alan Mowbray will be prominent.

"The Bargain," with Lewis Stone, Doris Kenyon, Charles Butterworth, Evalyn Knapp and others, September 19. This is a film version of Philip Barry's Pulitzer prize play, "You and I."

September 26 is the national release date of "The Road to Singapore," the picture in which William Powell makes his debut as a Warner Bros. star. Marian Marsh will be seen opposite the star, with Doris Kenyon and Louis Calhern in important supporting parts.

"Penrod and Sam," with Leon Janney in the role of Tarkington's great youngster, Penrod, will be nationally released October 3.

"Five Star Final," adapted from Louis Weitzenkorn's sensational drama of the tabloids, is scheduled for October 10, with Edward G. Robinson, star of "Little Caesar" and "Smart Money," as star. In the cast are Frances Starr, Marian Marsh, H. B. Warner and Anthony Bushell.

Dolores Costello's return to the screen after an absence of more than two years will be signalized by the release on October 17 of "Expensive Women." Warren Williams, recruited from the stage, will be her leading man.

"The Ruling Voice," starring Walter Huston, supported by Loretta Young and Doris Kenyon, will be released October 24.

Winnie Lightner, with Charles Butterworth, Evalyn Knapp and Donald Cook, October 31.

John Barrymore, again supported by Marian Marsh, will be available for the screens of the country in "The Mad Genius" November 7.

With such a line-up as this in sight, it seems too bad that the Metropolitan should be closed, even temporarily. But think of the "grand openings" when the Met, the Rialto and the rest of them get going again!

If Washington had any such thing as a Newsreel Theater, such as they have in New York, it would probably be bearing down on the fact that this week's issue of the Fox Movietone News features a prominent young Washingtonian. Miss Catherine Dubois, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. B. P. Dubois, 3317 Rowland place northwest, is pictured on the Fox screen in the act of shaking hands with Aristide Briand, noted French statesman, during a recent visit to Paris.

A brief call from W. T. Buchanan, veteran newspaper man and publicist, has just apprised me that I was wrong again.

For a long time now it has been my impression that the circus parade was a thing of the past—a dim memory of prancing horses, red and gold wagons, beautiful equestriennes, elephants and calliopes, never to return in actuality. My grudge has been held against John Ringling, the great menagerie and merger man, for abolishing this picturesque bit of pageantry as a part of the business of cornering the circus market.

But it seems that the big Sarasota, Fla., showman, didn't corner the market—quite.

The Robbins Bros. Circus is still rambling around the country after the manner of circuses of the old days, when pink lemonade was pink lemonade, and they're giving the natives of every "pitch" all the thrill of the "magnificent free street pageant" that was more than half of any "circus day" back when they had hitching rails around the Court House Square and the outriders warned the visiting gentry, in for the day, to "hold your horses, the elephants are coming."

And that isn't all. The big red wagons and other parade equipment are the original Barnum & Bailey rolling stock, made for the greatest part in Europe. Many of the wagons are hand-carved and decorated with real gold leaf. They represent the various countries of Europe and each bears the official seal of the nation to which it is dedicated.

And if you think I'm not going down to Alexandria when they play there Friday, you're probably just a bit touched by the sun.

Reverting momentarily to that Bennett family, Joan, the youngest—and some, including this column, think the most talented of the second generation of the acting clan—last week signed a long-term contract with Samuel Goldwyn, for whom she made her first picture and who originally persuaded her to visit Hollywood. Miss Bennett made her screen debut for Mr. Goldwyn opposite Ronald Colman in "Bulldog Drummond," his first talking picture.

Under the new agreement, which makes the baby of the Bennetts a United Artists star along with Ina Claire, Gloria Swanson, Eddie Cantor, Lily Damita and the rest, she will make two pictures a year in which she will be individually starred, except when appearing in a costellar capacity with Ronald Colman, Eddie Cantor or Douglas Fairbanks.

Her first individual starring vehicle has not yet been chosen.

And Mr. William Gillette, if he appears, has signified his willingness to do a Sarah Bernhardt next season. The veteran actor will emerge from retirement to undertake another tour of the country in "Sherlock Holmes," if it can be so routed as not to be too arduous for one of his years.

By the way, how do you manage about these chilly nights with the blankets all down in the safety deposit box for the summer?

Penny-a-Night Cell Readied for Gandhi

Settlement House Prepares to Shelter Him on London Visit.

London, July 28 (A.P.).—A Roof-top cell in the Kinsley Hall Settlement, Fowis road, Bow, has been prepared for Mahatma Gandhi if he comes to London to attend the round table conference in August. To reach it involves a climb of about 100 steps.

In some dispatches from India doubt is expressed as to whether Gandhi will attend the conference, but if he does he will find the kind of quarters here which appeal to his ascetic nature.

The cell has often provided a night's lodging for members of crowded households in Bow at one penny a night. It contains a camp bed and a table, on which is a volume of poems by Tagore.

What Today Means to You

"LEO."

IF July 28 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:30 a. m. to 9 a. m., from 3 p. m. to 5 p. m., and from 11 p. m. to midnight. The danger hours are from 11 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. and from 7:30 p. m. to 10 p. m.

July 28 will be one of the best days of this week, from an astrological standpoint. There are no setbacks indicated, and harmony will prevail within the home. Those engrossed in love affairs will find it a propitious time for engagements, and few nuptial vows taken on this date will be broken.

Children born on July 28, 1931, will not be have decisive natures and their lack of purpose will stand in their way to success. They will desire popularity, and will have ambitious dreams. There is a decided lack of caution in their make-ups, and they may suffer through their adventures.

Born on July 28, the elements of your horoscope show an amazing mixture of high destiny, great successes and ill-luck. There will be peaceful, happy and bounteous periods of your life. There will also be periods when the arms of Fate will bear heavily upon you, and you will meet with extreme difficulties. You should always avoid shouldering obligations on behalf of others, even near relatives. They will invariably plunge you, an innocent victim, into a whirlwind of problems and annoyances. You are inclined to step into the breach when others have shirked their duty. You do things for others, which are never done for you, because of your natural unselfishness and your willingness to be of service to humanity. You should watch out more for "number one."

You have a natural appreciation of art, and although not destined to be a master yourself, you are able to enjoy and understand the works of real genius. You have the qualifications of a good critic. A quiet, secluded life with the friendships of a few is the ideal existence for you. People in general do not interest you, and you try to avoid promiscuous acquaintance and associations. You love your fellow creatures in a Christian way, in the bigger sense of the word, but you like only a few.

Successful people born July 28:

Nicholas Brown 1st, a benefactor of Brown University.

Ormsby McKey Mitchel, astronomer and soldier.

Ballington Booth, philanthropist.

Mary Anderson, actress.

Elisha S. Converse, capitalist.

Herman V. Hilprecht, archeologist.

Art Interprets the Mode

Mary Nowitzky's black satin frock is worn over a yellow wool bathing suit with black satin trunks, and the headkerchief is black satin, lined in yellow and monogrammed.

New York, July 27.

O-H-H-H-H if you think they haven't brains, just you talk to one of 'em for ten consecutive minutes! 'N' if you think they haven't definite likes and dislikes and opinions and prejudices, just you try to make one of 'em buy something or wear anything she doesn't happen to fancy! Of course it's a she—we wouldn't write about anything else in our column; now, would we? And the fact that she's eleven and a half or perhaps a year or so more doesn't make one particle of difference in my above statement.

We simply musn't leave our Wee Mamzelles out of our columns. I was informed by a very indignant young lady who wanted to know why children's styles weren't as important as grown-ups'. (Which was so hard to answer satisfactorily that I simply gave up and decided to write about 'em this once.)

Wee Mamzelles of this age, and older, to the subdeb stage, have a fondness, sometimes concealed, for paper dolls—and why? They like 'em because they are ladies and because they wear fashionable and colorful clothes—never because they're wide-eyed or dimple-cheeked or doll-y. Children cut out illustrations from the latest fashion magazines for their paper dolls and base their tastes and conceptions of style on these.

Children's styles are just as important as grown-ups'. They clothe themselves in fabrics every bit as fine as ours—certain colors become them and others are ugly on them—certain styles emphasize their good points while others make them as awkward as colts. And leading Paris couturieres have special departments for growing daughters where wise parents follow style-wise guidance. And the wise American mother will stop trying to force daughter to wear a dress she detests—for daughter knows what's what, and can't be fooled.

Just by way of being different this year, ever so many people have looked scornfully at plain wool bathing suits, have turned their noses up haughtily at beach pyjamas, and then fallen all in a heap for the little beach frocks that slip on so easily over their bathing suits. It's a splendid idea, as it keeps you safe from sudden chilly breezes without sacrificing any of your bathing-suited appearance. And a stunning example of a beach frock is the one from Mary Nowitzky which I sketch for you today. This is black satin, with a wide belt, worn over a yellow wool bathing suit with satin shorts. And this same color scheme is used for the headkerchief, with its graceful, gipsy-like air and its swanky monogram.

If you don't appear to advantage in the masculine beach pyjamas of today, or the bulky capes of past seasons, do get a beach frock like this one as the answer to your particular needs.

* * * *

'N' slip your feet into these yellow cork and shiny yellow and black satin beach sandals from Mary Nowitzky to complete your chic perfection.

* * * *

'N' the onliest thing that could have made it cost such a fortune are those silver mesh buttons. 'N' even though they are lovely I do think $80 is too steep for 'em. So-o-o-o-o-o, I'm going to make some just like 'em, see if I don't. And I did, my deahs, and just loads of other fascinating handworked things besides—and then I got generous and told you how to make them in this week's illustrated leaflet, which you may get by simply sending your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare department of The Washington Post.

Wives of Tomorrow

—FRANCES M'DONALD—

Whose Husband Wrote This?

DEAR Frances McDonald: As my wife reads your column, I ask you to publish this letter, and perhaps add a few words that might impress her. I may begin by saying that I believe in marriage to one person for life. However, I feel that in cases like mine the man should feel his obligations at an end, and should be freed. My wife when I married her was a pretty, plump, but attractive, girl of 25. Occasionally I had noted at times a slight deviation from strict daintiness in her appearance, but supposed it was due to hurry or other cause.

She was a stenographer, and worked from 8:30 until 5 o'clock. She lived at home, and her sister and mother kept house. I met the sister first. She is a care-free type, but a fine housekeeper, and immaculate at any hour or place, as I have found out since becoming one of the family. After meeting the second sister I became a caller at the home, started going with her, and finally we were married.

I must be at my office at 9:30. I get up at 7:30, take my bath, dress and go out in the garden. At 8 I begin calling my wife. About 8:50 she comes down unwashed, without even stockings, and proceeds to throw a breakfast at me. The food is as unappetizing as the woman who prepares it. I leave the house disgusted with life. She wonders why I never kiss her. She ought to be able to dope it out. I lived at a "Y" before I married. Some of the fellows there were pretty ordinary, but I never knew one who was not clean. My wife is too lazy to even keep herself clean. She wears her hair long. On July 4 she sat around until 5 o'clock in the evening without even combing that neglected hair.

For the benefit of prohibitionists, I will hasten to state that she does not drink, as might be supposed. She is just a lazy, self-satisfied woman who thinks anything she does is all right. She hates to cook and does it badly. About three times a week she takes the roast over to her mother's, where the meal is decently prepared. I enjoy those meals. I enjoy the cool restful atmosphere about the place. She always goes to a show on these occasions, and I sit and talk with the sister until dinner is ready. You would never know she was getting a meal. She just flits in and out—and the meal is ready. She does all the work of the house. But her hands and nails are cared for, her hair always shining and always has the dope on the newest book out.

The mother likes to tease me, telling me I married the wrong girl and that she warned me in advance. Correct in both. I love my sister-in-law, although she does not dream it, and I consider my wife should free me and make no fuss about it, if her sister would have me,—which I doubt. However, free or not, I intend to go back to the "Y" and let my wife stay in bed, unwashed and comfortable, the rest of her life. Give me a gold digger, who at least delivers the goods by making life pleasant for the man she picks. Compared to women like my wife the gold digger is a bargain at any price.

FIVE-YEARS-LATER.

Your wife may not drink, but she is far from normal, and the sooner you have a specialist examine her the better. Go to a competent psychiatrist and arrange to have him meet your wife. I believe he will confirm my opinion. She will become an entirely new woman with treatment, if my theory concerning her is correct—as I positively believe. You owe her the benefit of the doubt and competent diagnosis. Put your sister-in-law out of your mind and do your duty as a husband. If you discover that your wife is just lazy—leave her by all means. But know what your are doing. And only a psychiatrist can tell you. So consult one without delay.

Culbertson on Contract

by Ely Culbertson

TIMING YOUR TRICK-TAKING.

THE moral of this story, which, unlike the writers of fairy tales, I give in the first sentence rather than at the end, is not to be in too great a hurry to take a trick if you are certain that later on you can take a trick anyway.

Below I give an example where the Declarer, although holding the high card of the suit led, and that suit one which had been bid against him, should make no effort to win the second round of the suit because of the danger that it will be trumped by Third Hand. If that happened it would be a trick lost forever and it would be not only a trick, but a lost game of Contract. Later when the adverse trumps had been pulled and thus the ability of the opponents to impede the Declarer in making game had been destroyed, the high card would provide a discard for a sure loser. Games are lost at the Contract table daily because the principle here illustrated is not observed.

This hand was played in the Contract Pair Championship of the American Bridge League. South was the dealer, both sides were vulnerable, and the cards were distributed thus:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1♠	3♥ (1)
3♠ (2)	Pass	4♠ (3)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—While there is a slight element of danger in East's bid of three hearts, his hand is very strong and does not appear to be bid over its probable trick-taking ability if partner's hand is not an absolute blank. Ordinarily, the hand would make five heart tricks, in addition to its trick-taking probabilities in diamonds and clubs.

2—South has a choice between doubling East's bid of three hearts and assisting the spades. As the sequel shows, he made the wiser choice. Played at hearts, East would lose two hearts, one spade, one diamond and one club and if the Double of a contract of three was permitted to stand, would have saved a game at comparatively light cost.

3—In the additional length of his spade suit, North finds the justification for a further bid. Assured of adequate trump support, his hand counts for 7 playing tricks.

East had a particularly undesirable hand from which to lead. Probably the lead of the singleton trump could have done no harm, so far as his partner's trump holding was concerned, but on the other hand, this lead could have been of no benefit to the defending players. In both diamonds and clubs, East's holding was in tenace position, i. e., he held honor combinations not in sequence, from which it is generally undesirable to lead. The same was true of his hearts but the length of the heart suit, coupled with West's refusal to assist his Jump bid, indicated that possibly his partner might have held only one. East, therefore, wisely selected the heart Ace as his Opening lead and when the Dummy went down, East saw there were only three hearts not in sight. When West played the nine and North false-carded the seven, East was not bluffed into discontinuing the suit. His partner's nine might have been a singleton; in fact, it almost certainly was, as otherwise he would not start an "echo" in a suit bid by his partner with the high card in that suit showing and North probably holding no more. East, therefore, led the heart Queen to the second round and it was the Declarer's play to this trick which determined the fate of the contract.

Thoughtless play would have been to play the King, but this obvious play was far from the best. North held a losing card in the club suit. He must lose a diamond trick. If he loses the established heart King, as well, then the contract must be lost. The proper play was to play a low card from Dummy on the heart and permit East to hold the trick. On the lead of the third round of hearts, if East decided to continue that suit, the Dummy would cover any card led and if West ruffed, North would over-ruff. Played thus, North's contract was assured. He lost only 2 hearts and 1 diamond trick, discarding the losing club Knave on the established heart King after pulling the adverse trumps.

In this article two technical Bridge terms are used, which may require explanation. The first is the word "echo," which is a term used to designate the play of a higher card of the suit before a lower when not attempting to win the trick. The echo is used to ask a partner to continue the suit.

The word "ruff," as used in Contract, is synonymous with the word "trump" when used to indicate the playing of a trump on the lead of another suit.

Today's Pointer—Rule of Eight in Slam Bids.

The maximum available number of taking honor-tricks in a deal is between 8 and 8½.

If about 7 honor-tricks are accounted for they will automatically include at least three Aces. On the other hand if but 6 honor-tricks are accounted for, the Slam, in all probability, will fail.

Therefore:

Count the number of honor-tricks shown by partner's bids. Add the total to the honor-tricks held in own hand and subtract from 8—8½ (depending upon distribution). The balance remaining, if any, will indicate the possible maximum opponents can take with honors.

HOPELESS PLAYERS.

While the standard of Bridge has undoubtedly improved all round during the past few years, I am constantly amazed at the number of hopeless players one still meets. I am not now referring to domestic or social Bridge.

The cases I am considering are the regular and ardent devotees of Bridge who play every day at Clubs, and who play so atrociously that it is painful to be their partners.

I meet constantly at Clubs players who have been at the game ever since it was invented who can only be described as hopeless.

They never get any better, and they go on making the same mistakes and blunders year after year, quite unconscious of the fact.

Some of the worst are quite pleased with their game, and consider themselves good.

Others sometimes say, depreciatingly, "Well, of course, I don't claim to be an expert," but they say it with an air which shows they hope to be contradicted.

I am not afraid of any of these hopeless players whom I meet at Clubs fitting the cap and applying my remarks to themselves, because one of their chief characteristics is that they never read anything about Bridge. For some reason or other they rather pride themselves on this fact.

"I have never read a Bridge book or article in my life." I heard one of them say. The obvious retort was, "I should have thought so from your play."

YOU KNOW THE GUY.

Editor's Note: Mr. Morton Wild, the author of the poem below, is a very good Bridge player. He must have had a rather bitter experience to cause him to write with so much feeling.

I can stand for the simp who puts catsup in soup,
Or who talks with cigar in his mouth
Or the idiot born in New York or Vermont
Who claims that he comes from the South.

I can live with the fool who wears stiff-bosomed shirts,
Or who walks with his "shoulders braced back,"
Or the bore who will name every automobile
From the millionaire's car to the hack.

I'll play Bridge with the gink who loves shutting-out bids,
Or the guy who forever is chinning,
Or the pest who yelps loudest when losing a hand,
And who's equally boisterous when winning.

It is easy to see I am not hard to please,
But there's one sort of fellow I'll trouble
To keep from my path or encounter my wrath—
He's the partner who "rescues" my Double.

MORTON WILD.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

PLEASE help me with my gladiolus. I have given my plants plenty of water and have cultivated the soil constantly and in spite of all this the foliage is turning brown and apparently dying. What do you suggest? Please tell me the name of the inclosed plant. I planted a wistaria vine which did very well this spring for about two months, but now it seems to be gradually drying up.

MRS. DEWITT C. E.

Try administering liquid manure to your gladiolus. Give each bulb a cupful of a rather weak solution. Also be sure to keep them very moist at the roots. The flower you inclosed was a scabiosa, an annual grown for cutting. Better give your wistaria a great deal more water. The first season a wistaria should be watered almost every day. Also keep the weeds from encroaching on the roots. A little liquid manure would probably benefit the vine at this time.

William F. D.—The flower you inclosed was, I feel sure, from the Anthony Waterer spirea, probably the most dwarf type of spirea, blooming quite profusely in early summer and continuing to bloom more sparsely throughout the summer. This is a fine shrub to use as a foreground plant. It does best in a light soil in any sunny location.

Please tell me how to plant hardy lily bulbs. MAY H. S.

Lilies thrive best in a well-dug, rich soil. Deep planting is always recommended—at least 6 inches deep for most, and more than that for the speciosum varieties. It is best when setting the bulb to surround it with sand.

Please give me the names of several varieties of hardy plants which can be grown from seed. I mean seed which if sown late this season will bloom next summer.

EMILY L.

Aenonthera (evening primrose), lythrum (purple loosestrife), lobelia, lupinus, candytuft, hollyhock, hibiscus (these plants will produce blooms the first year if the seeds are sown early enough), foxgloves, bleeding heart, sweet william and Canterbury bells.

FAILURE TO PROVIDE FOR BUSES ASSAILED

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 909. Clarendon, Va.

Discussing the question of an adequate terminal for the bus lines entering Washington, Leon Arnold, president of the Washington-Maryland-Virginia Coach Co., yesterday declared that the bus companies are taking care of transportation of its thousands of patrons and are not concerned about the matter of a terminal.

"If the bus operators were accorded near the consideration given the taxicab operators and other transportation systems using the streets of Washington, there would be no trouble in reaching a satisfactory arrangement between the Public Utilities Commission and the bus operators," he declared.

"The Federal Government today is in the midst of the greatest building and improvement program in its history and when completed promises to present the most beautiful city in the country, and it should be the policy of the Public Utilities Commission to see to it that the thousands of persons coming into the city in buses and other means of transportation are permitted to come into the improved section instead of making it impossible for the buses to enter that area," Mr. Arnold said.

"Having been in the transportation business for many years, having operated bus lines within the City of Washington prior to coming to Virginia with what I consider one of the most modern lines, I consider it nothing short of an outrage that we are not given a little consideration on the part of the utilities commissioin. We are not seeking a terminal in Washington, which I consider would do more to block traffic than anything else. All we want is an adequatae place where we can stop, take on and unload our thousands of passengers," he said.

Opening his campaign in Arlington County, Col. Charles T. Jesse, who seeks the nomination for the State Senate over John W. Rust, of Fairfax County, speaking at the monthly meeting of the Thrifton Village Improvement League last night referred to his long experience in the Legislature of Virginia and among other things stated that he had always strongly advocated free text books in the public schools, Arlington County being the only one whose school children enjoy that privilege.

He stated also that he was one of the sponsors of a constitutional amendment which made possible the recently adopted new form of county government which will become effective in Arlington County January 1, 1932.

Hugh Reid, who is the Democratic candidate for reelection to the House of Delegates, stated that inasmuch as his Republican opponent, J. Foster Hagan, was not present he felt it unfair for him to speak and therefore declined.

Other speakers were Walter U. Varney and Hugh M. McCaffrey, candidates for the office of trial justice of the county court.

The Ricker-for-County-Board Club was perfected at Clarendon last night with the election of John McCormick as its president. W. R. Gould was elected secretary.

The club was organized for the purpose of aiding in the election of George D. Ricker, who recently resigned as commander of the Arlington Post, No. 139, American Legion, that he might become a candidate. The meeting was attended by delegates from each of the eleven voting precincts in the county.

Prompt action on the part of Dr. Norbert Melnick, county sanitary inspector of the county health department, in ordering all dumping stopped at the newly created dump which fronts on the Washington-Richmond highway, below Columbia pike, yesterday followed a flood of protests that garbage was being unloaded at the dump.

The Lyon Park Citizens Association will meet tonight in the community house.

Middleton's Cows Take High Honors

Herd Makes Best Record for Month in Tests Held in Fairfax County.

The report of N. L. Lowery, tester of Fairfax County Dairy Herd Improvement Association, No. 1, for the last month shows that 635 cows were tested. Of this number 76 were dry, 93 cows produced over 40 pounds of butterfat each and 21 were sold for beef. The average production of the association was 675.54 pounds of milk and 26.04 pounds of butterfat.

The high-herd honor for the month was won by a grade herd of Holstein and Guernsey cows owned by M. H. Middleton. This herd had an average production of 1,046.8 pounds of milk and 44.4 pounds of butterfat. The herd belonging to Marvin Perkins ranked second with an average production of 1,124.5 pounds of milk and 39.3 pounds of butterfat. The three other ranking herds were owned by Broadacre Farms, R. L. Harrison & Son, and Ben Middleton & Sons.

The high-cow honors were won by a cow belonging to Dr. F. W. Hudleson by making an average of 1,355 pounds of milk and 90.8 pounds of butterfat. Of the ten cows making the highest averages, R. L. Harrison & Son owned 2; A. S. Harrison & Sons, 3; Marvin Perkins, 3, and M. H. Middleton, 1. These cows produced more than 60 pounds of butterfat each.

The cows producing more than 40 pounds of butterfat each were owned as follows: A. S. Harrison & Sons, Dr. F. W. Huddleson and Marvin Perkins, 10 each; Ben Middleton & Son, R. L. Harrison & Son and Broadacre Farms, 9 each; M. H. Middleton, 6; G. M. James, 5; W. H. Ellmore, H. O. Peck and Bavensworth Farm, 4 each; F. E. Peck and J. B. Armfield, 3 each; W. M. McNair, W. W. Rietzer and A. J. Cox, 2 each, and Edgar E. Beard, 1.

Camp Furor Is Caused By Woodcock's Horse

Camp Ritchie, Md., July 27.—Consternation reigned in the horse corral in the camp today. The horse, which had been assigned to Lieut. Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, prohibition administrator, who is serving as executive officer for the annual encampment of the First Regiment, Maryland National Guard, arrived at the corral, riderless and minus his bridle, apparently after a hard run.

The horse was captured and the sergeant in charge hurried off to the officer's quarters of the camp, visions of mangled prohibition administrator's remains dangling before his eyes. When he arrived at Col. Woodcock's tent he found the colonel calmly studying his bibliography on Gen. Braddock, about whom he plans to write a sketch.

When matters were explained, it seems that Col. Woodcock had told his orderly to bright up the bridle. In removing the bridle and before the orderly could substitute a halter, the animal turned around and galloped off.

Bladensburg Jail Closed As Prince Georges Prison

The Bladensburg Jail was closed yesterday to Prince Georges County prisoners by Sheriff W. C. Hopkins, who announced that all prisoners delivered into his custody hereafter must be taken to the new jail at Marlboro.

Some time ago Sheriff Hopkins asked the county commissioners to close the lock-up, after the county health officer had declared it "insanitary and filthy." The sheriff told the commissioners that he was afraid that he would be financially liable if any prisoner became ill or died on account of the condition of the building. At this time the commissioners agreed to take the responsibility if more than six prisoners were kept in the place.

Yesterday, as a result of a series of week-end raids, there were seventeen prisoners in the jail, which has only two cells and a corridor. The sheriff had them all removed to Marlboro, and announced that the place would no longer be used to keep the prisoners for which he is responsible. A number of the incorporated towns in the vicinity keep in the jail prisoners who have violated town ordinances, however, and the jail will still be used for them.

The jail is an old, small stone structure. The jailer does not live near it. Early this year there were eleven escapes from it within three months, and several years ago a prisoner narrowly escaped drowning when the nearby Anacostia River rose and filled the structure almost to the roof.

Boy Scouts' Field Day Is Staged at Glen Echo

Several hundred Boy Scouts of the District and nearby Maryland were given the "run of the land" at Glen Echo yesterday, when the annual field day in Washington scoutdom took place at the park.

There was a water frolic in the large pool with several contests of skill. Free entrance was given the Scouts in the carrousel, "Old Mill" and whip. E. C. Hartung, deputy commissioner of Boy Scouts for the District, was in charge of the outing.

The charge resulted from a collision late Sunday evening in the town of Fairfax. Bannester was arrested by Fairfax County Policeman Arthur W. Mills.

Familyof 3 Buried After Grade Crash

16 Pallbearers Serve at Rites for Norris, Wife and Child.

Sixteen pallbearers yesterday carried to their graves the bodies of an entire family which was wiped out Saturday when the auto in which they were riding struck a train at Derwood, Md., near Rockville.

There were six pallbearers for Samuel T. Norris, father of the family, and six for his wife, Mamie. Four others carried the casket of their 3-year-old daughter, Alice. All the dead, who lived at Travilah, Md., were buried in the cemetery of the Darnestown Presbyterian Church, where services were held. The pallbearers were all relatives of the family.

Mrs. Lottie Whalen, who was also injured in the crash, will be able to leave the Montgomery County Hospital in a few days, it was said yesterday. Her 1-year-old daughter, who was with her in the car, will be there a few days longer before she will be well enough to leave, it was said.

MONTGOMERY CLUB PASSES ROAD PLAN

Body Votes to Avoid Acts in Politics Embarrassing to Members.

A $750,000 road-building program for the northern and central parts of Montgomery County was approved last night by the Montgomery County Government Club, which met in the Elementary School in Bethesda. The club, at a previous meeting, had approved a road program for the suburban area of the county.

An amendment to the by-laws was adopted last night providing that the club will take no political action in 1932 which would ambarrass any member. This is virtually a promise that the club will not indorse any presidential candidate next year, for the protection of Government workers, who are also members. Government employes are forbidden to take any part in national politics.

About 400 persons, delegates from every election precinct in the county, were present last night, and approval of the road schedule was unanimous. The program, which is for 1931-32 construction was tentatively drawn up by the Board of County Commissioners.

By-laws previously proposed were adopted in toto, with addition of the political activity amendment proposed by Edward H. Jones, of Chevy Chase. Harry Shaw, county engineer, explained construction of the Fern street underpass in the District, which will connect the work being done by the county. Maj. E. Brooke Lee, who presided, said there would be no more meetings until fall unless something important comes up.

A Montgomery County petit jury, recalled yesterday morning to decide three cases of condemnation of land in the Sligo Valley Park project, spent the greater part of the day inspecting properties involved. Arguments by lawyers for the Park and Planning Commission and testimony of witnesses took up the rest of the day.

The hearing will continue today, when the commission will present the rest of its witnesses and attorneys for the property owners will be heard. The jury may return today its decision as to a proper price to be paid for the three tracts. The properties involved are the Heath, Baggett and Holland lots.

NATS HAMMER 3 CLEVELAND PITCHERS FOR 11-7 WIN

1,500 at Fort Watch Red Head Outbox Game Opponent.

Schwartz Knocks Out Edwards in Fourth; Foul Is Claimed.

By WALTER HAIGHT.

YOUTHFUL REDS BARRY, who flies the commodore's flag in the Mohawk Club's boxing fleet, proved convincingly that he is master of Billy Strickler, another Washington gift to the light-heavyweight class, last night in the feature bout of the Fort Washington Athletic Association's weekly program down the river.

It was Barry's third meeting with Strickler and the Mohawk boy may have gathered a little more from the bout than the victory and his end of the purse. If Young Barry is a wise fighter and is to gain the heights that many of his backers believe he will, he probably learned last night the mistake of underestimating an opponent to the extent of trying to loaf his way through a fight, especially a ten-round fight. Mr. Strickler proved to be in anything but a playful mood and Barry was forced to bring out everything he had to stay in front.

Seven Rounds to Barry, One to Strickler.

The Post scorecard gave Barry seven rounds, Strickler one, the sixth, with the first and seventh even.

Strickler served notice on Barry as early as the opening skirmish that there would be real fighting. While Barry was loafing along, often leaving his guard down, Strickler kept coming in. Although Billy just managed to hold his own in the exchanges, it was evident that the Mohawk boxer was not taking his opponent seriously.

Although Barry's superior boxing ability earned him the third, fourth and fifth rounds, the farther the bout went the more Barry had to work to gain the advantage. Many of his blows were either striking Strickler's gloves or sliding off his elbows but those that connected, both left and rights, did not seem to hamper Billy.

The sixth round relieved Barry of all doubts as to the ability of his opponent. Strickler not only came to Barry but got in over his guard and opened up with a series of left and right hooks that won him the round. Strickler was able to keep up his offensive in the seventh enough to earn an even break, but from that point on, Barry, awake to the necessity of really fighting, won by a wide margin.

Edwards Counted Out While On Feet.

As a whole, the card was one of the best staged at the Fort, but the semi-final in which Billy Schwartz, Alexandria pride, took on one Gus Edwards, an ancient gladiator from Baltimore, left 1,500 present in a mental muddle. Edwards, old and honest with a Fitzsimmons stance, more than held his own with the Alexandrian. In the fourth round Schwartz slammed in a low left and Gus grabbed at his groin, apparently in pain. Referee Charley Short, despite the fact that Edwards was on his feet, counted him out while waving Schwartz away.

Edwards' second claimed a foul. Capt. A. R. Leopold, medical officer, was called and after an examination it was announced that Edwards had a bruise on his groin. A moment later Jimmy Lake shouted that the official verdict was a knockout for Schwartz.

Schwartz's Eye Is Target.

Edwards, alleged to be 40 years old, can still shoot straight. He made a target of a spot near Schwartz' left eye and was making a good average before the bout ended.

The four-round division gave the customers some of the best fighting seen in this section. Sailor Oden won from Sammy Hogan in a slam-bang battle in which Hogan finally reached his objective, a blow to Oden's stomach, but just as the final bell rang. Oden had the best of a lot of toe-to-toe slugging.

Soldier Clark won the decision over a mighty tough boy in Billy Hoe, while K. O. Riley, Washington welterweight, took every round from George Goldsbee, of Fort Howard, Third Corps Area champion.

In the opener Jimmy Reed, former Boys Club boxer, hammered out a decision over Mike Grove, making his first appearance in any ring.

DOEG WINS 2 MATCHES AT SEABRIGHT

Bell Beaten in Upset; Mrs. Moody Wins by Default.

SEABRIGHT, N. J., July 27 (A.P.).—John Hope Doeg, of Newark, N. J., national singles champion, led the field into the quarter-final round of the forty-fourth annual Seabright invitation tennis tournament today. He scored hard-won victories over Edward Burns, jr., and Eugene McCauliff, both of New York.

Doeg, already beaten twice this season, the last time by Ellsworth Vines, of Pasadena, in the Longwood Bowl tournament, first whipped Burns by scores of 7—5, 6—4, and then was carried to three sets by McCauliff, 6—3, 2—6, 6—1.

Two Singles Matches Ordered By Committee.

The tournament committee sprang a surprise when it altered its usual custom of giving contestants only one singles match a day to play. All first round and seven second round matches were played, reducing the field of 32 to 10.

Joining Doeg in the third round were Vines, Gregory Mangin, of Newark; Cliff Sutter, of New Orleans; Keith Gledhill, of Santa Barbara; Wilbur F. Coen, of Kansas City, and Jack Tidball, of Los Angeles.

Dr. Carl Fischer, of Woodbury, N. J., who sprang the biggest surprise of the day by beating Berkeley Bell, New York, in the first round, bowed to Tidball in the second. Tidball had beaten the veteran J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., 6—2, 6—3, earlier in the day.

Third round pairings tomorrow pit Vines against Coen, Tidball against Mangin, Sutter against Gledhill and Doeg against either Stoffen or Grant.

In women's singles, Baroness Levi plays Miss Morrill; Miss Greef vs. Miss Hilleary; Mrs. Jessup vs. Miss Jacobs; Miss Palfrey vs. Mrs. Van Ryn; Mrs. Harper vs. Mrs. Lamme; Miss Cruickshank vs. Miss Zinke.

Mrs. Moody, Non-Arrival, Wins By Default.

Play was pushed forward in both the women's singles and doubles. Of the group of stars in women's singles only Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, of San Francisco, failed to appear. She was notified before she left New York that her opponent, Mrs. J. Dallas Corbiere, of Boston, had defaulted. She will not swing into action until 1:45 (E. S. S.), when she opposes Virginia Rice, of Boston. Miss Rice won today from Alice Francis, of Orange, N. J., 6—2, 6—2.

Mrs. Moody's chief rival, Helen Jacobs, was extended in the first round by Clara Greenspan, of New York, before she could win at 6—3, 6—4.

MEN'S SINGLES.

British Tennis Hero Will Seek U. S. Crown

London, July 27 (A.P.).—S. F. Perry, father of Fred Perry, sensational 21-year-old English Davis Cup tennis player, today announced his son would sail for the United States Saturday to compete in the United States national championship at Forest Hills, September 5 to 12.

The elder Perry, a Labor member of Parliament, made the announcement while waiting at the station to greet his son and the other members of the English Davis Cup squad returning from an unsuccessful set-to with France in the challenge round.

It was the first time England had advanced to the challenge round since 1919.

Bush Recites Woes; Denies He'll Quit

Pleads for Pitchers With Staff Riddled by Injuries.

No Tilt With Officials; 4 Available Hurlers Must Work Often.

By EDWARD J. NEIL.

NEW YORK, July 27 (A.P.).—Fiery little Donie Bush arose indignantly from his matutinal ham and eggs today to deny that he was quitting the helm of the Chicago White Sox or that he had any differences with the owners of the ball club.

From Chicago had come, a bit earlier, a story that peppery Donie was disgusted with the Sox and their failure to get higher than seventh place in the American League standing. The report had it he was ready to withdraw as manager, although his two-year contract does not expire until October. Pitchers, or the lack of them, provided the bone of contention over which Donie was reported tiffing with the veteran owner, Charley Comiskey.

"It's the bunk," snorted Donie wrathfully. "I never heard of such a thing. I haven't even had a cross word with club officials. And I have absolutely no idea of quitting. I don't quit."

Need for Pitchers Is General.

Donie poked viciously at his ham and eggs.

"I've been pleading for pitchers. Sure; who hasn't? Outside of the Athletics, Washington and Cleveland, there isn't a club in the league that doesn't need pitchers. We all want them, but there don't happen to be any to get.

"My pitching staff is riddled. Right now I've got four pitchers who can work, and one of them, Pat Caraway, has been in there so often he's lost all his effectiveness. That leaves me Red Faber, Tommy Thomas and Vic Frasier. They're pitching great ball. But if they have a bad day I haven't a man to send in to relieve them. Ted Lyons has a bad arm. It's been sore all season."

Outlines His Troubles.

Carefully, almost pathetically, Donie outlined his pitching troubles. Big Jim Moore, one of his two relief pitchers, has been shipped back to Chicago with "trench mouth," an infection of the gums, and the club doctor tells Donie that Hal McKain, his other finisher, has an inflamed shoulder and is out of the game indefinitely. Things have got to such a point Big Smead Jolly, the outfielder, who is just recovering from a broken leg, has offered to turn pitcher, but Donie doesn't think the situation is quite as bad as that.

"The fans are always satisfied and so is every one else," Donie explained. "If they're sure you're trying all the time. I had to let Caraway stay in yesterday and take a bad beating from the Yankees because I had no one else to put in. I finally sent Wehde, a rookie, in there because he was the best I had.

Never Stopped Trying.

"Maybe that didn't look as though I was trying, but it wasn't that. I've never stopped trying. Anything else would be inexcusable. I just didn't have any one else to pitch if there were to be any one left for today's double-header."

Whereupon Donie tore back fiercely into the chilled ham and eggs.

No Managerial Shift Planned by Comiskey

Eagle River, Wis., July 27 (A.P.).—Charles A. Comiskey has not given any thought to a change in the management of the Chicago White Sox. He is concerned only with trying to obtain players to strengthen the club.

Harry Grabiner, secretary of the club, who is spending his vacation at Land o' Lakes, Wis., near the old Roman's camp, tonight said there had been no discussion of a successor for Donie Bush—neither Urban "Red" Faber, veteran pitcher, nor anyone else.

Grabiner quoted Comiskey as saying Bush would have to "do the best he can with what he has, until we can get more players, especially pitchers." Comiskey pointed out he had made every purchase and trade recommended by Bush, and that he would continue to try to obtain talent for the club.

"Mr. Comiskey has spent about $1,000,000 since 1920 trying to replace the 1919 team," Grabiner said.

YANKS SPLIT BILL WITH CHISOX

Ruth's 27th Homer Helps New York Divide Games.

NEW YORK, July 27 (A.P.).—For the second straight day, New York Yankees and Chicago White Sox split a double-header, the Sox winning the first of today's contests, 8 to 7, and the Yankees the nightcap, 12 to 3.

In the opener, Babe Ruth's 27th home run topped off a six-run rally, which tied the score, but Tony Lazzeri dropped Reynolds' fly in the tenth to allow the winning run to cross the plate. The second game was a repetition of yesterday's nightcap. The Yanks knocked McKain out of

Kid Chocolate Held On Charges of Girl

Havana, July 27 A.P.).—Kid Chocolate, Cuban boxer, was arrested today on a charge of attacking a 17-year-old girl. The charges were brought by Pablo Mora Nieto, father of Rosario Mora Martinez. The alleged offense occurred in February, according to Mora's deposition before the court of instruction.

Schaaf and Campolo Matched for Aug. 26

New York, July 27 (A.P.).—Ernie Schaaf, of Boston, and Victorio Campolo, giant Argentine heavyweight, today were signed by Jimmy Johnston for a fifteen-round bout at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, Wednesday, August 26.

Both were recent victims of Tommy Loughran's left hand, the Philadelphia dancing master jabbing out easy ten-round decisions over them in Madison Square Garden.

Since that time, however, Schaaf has been developing a knockout punch, twice tagging Jim Maloney, his Boston rival, for the long count in Boston arenas.

Schaaf is a protege of Jack Sharkey, who holds a half interest in his contract. Johnston prompted the recent draw between Sharkey and Mickey Walker.

JONES FACES CLEVELAND TODAY

Peck, Hard Pressed for Pitchers, May Use Brown.

"SAD SAM" JONES is being groomed to do the Washington hurling this afternoon, when the Indians are to be met in the second game of this four-game set, which ends the invasion of Western clubs. The old-timer was pounded off the hill by the Browns last Thursday, but in the past has been quite effective against the Indians and promises another victory this afternoon.

The Tribe mound staff took lots of punishment in the recent series with the world's champion Athletics and Skipper Roger Peckinpaugh last night was not sure whom he would call on for box duties. He intimated, however, that Clint Brown will get the call. He has never been effective against the Nats since coming to the majors.

Altrock and Schacht have started touring again. They returned yesterday from a Sabbath visit to Zanesville, Ohio, where they clowned at a "milk fund" benefit, and are due to make two trips away from home this week, showing at Greensboro Friday and at Youngstown Sunday.

Catcher Zachary Almond, former Quantico Marine star, reported to Manager Johnson yesterday. He was obtained from Youngstown to fill in here while Cliff Bolton remains on option with the Baltimore Orioles.

Kuhel made a nice play on Kamm ending the Indians' second round. He almost reached around behind the runner to take Crowder's throw after the batter had almost knocked down the Nat flinger with a line drive. The "General" stopped the ball with a defensive gesture and then made the killing at first.

Kamm made a great try for Cronin's double opening Washington's second. He went over behind third for the hot grasser, but could not quite reach the ball, although he managed to get his finger-tips on it.

West came in almost to the infield back of second to gather in Myatt's looper opening the third. Ending this round, Manush turned in the best play of the game when he raced toward the stands in left-center to take Hudlin's looper in the flat of his gloved hand. It was a real catch.

Sam Rice's single opening the third climbed all over Hudlin. The ball, a hard-hit grasser, hit the pitcher on the foot, ran up his leg and bounded high in the air off his shoulder.

A'S TRIUMPH ON HOMER IN 10TH

McNair's Clout Beats Browns, 5-4; Score Tied in Ninth.

PHILADELPHIA, July 27 (A.P.).—Rabbit McNair's home run in the tenth inning gave the world's champion Philadelphia Athletics a victory over the St. Louis Browns today, 5 runs to 4, and enabled them to hold their eleven-game lead over the Nats.

The winning homer was the third circuit drive of the game, which was a pitchers' duel between Walberg and Blaeholder.

Bing Miller hit the first round-tripper in the seventh, breaking a 2-2 tie. In the next inning Schulte's homer with one on base gave the Browns a one-run margin that the A's wiped out in the ninth on Cramer's double and a single by Simmons.

Blaeholder struck out nine batters. The victory was Walberg's sixteenth of the year.

Manush, Spencer and Kuhel Leaders in 15-Hit Attack.

Hudlin, Jablonowski Batted Out; Score Tied in Fifth.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

THE Nationals, except for the work of "General" Alvin Crowder, their starting pitcher, looked more like themselves against the Cleveland Indians yesterday than they have in some time. As a result, they turned in an 11-to-7 victory, which enabled them to gain half a game on the onerushing third-place Yankees, who could do no better than break even in a bargain-day bill with the White Sox. They held their margin behind the Athletics to eleven games, as the world's champs nosed out the Browns.

His mates gave Crowder an early four-run lead, but he frittered it away and it was the relief work of Carl Fischer which enabled the Nats to hold the Tribe in check while the Johnson hitters, thanks to some timely hits combined with four alien errors, went out in front again and were still there at the finish.

Tribe Utility Pitchers Ineffective.

Had Peckinpaugh's utility hurlers been effective, yesterday's fracas might have been quite a heated battle; but after Willis Hudlin failed, Pete Jablonowski also proved to be a bloomer, while the Nats scored two runs off Roxy Lawson, Peck's third guess.

Fifteen hits bounded off of the local bats, with Heinie Manush, who showed signs of coming out of his slump by getting three in the Sabbath contest, getting another trio yesterday, of which one was a triple and another a double. Joe Kuhel and Roy Spencer pressed Heinie for stick honors, the former getting two doubles and a single, while the catcher had to be satisfied with three one-shots. Joe Cronin walked twice and poled out two doubles on his five trips to the tee.

Sam West and Pitcher Carl Fischer were the only Nats to go hitless, but they made their presence felt in other ways, although Manush stole the fielding show, usually staged by West, by making a sensational one-hand grab of Hudlin's looper to deep left-center in the third canto.

It was not until the second that the Nats could get to Hudlin. Then doubles by Cronin and Kuhel, singles by Spencer and Crowder and a useful out netted two runs, while two more were coined in the third, which saw the end of Hudlin. In this latter round a single by Sam Rice, doubles by Manush and Kuhel, a wild pitch and West's long fly were used for run-making purposes.

Indians Overcome Nats' 4-Run Lead.

But four runs were not enough for Crowder. The Indians did not get a hit until the fourth and then they inserted four, giving them three runs. Three of these came after Burnett had singled between the first and second outs and they were real clouts, being doubles by Morgan and Vosmik and a single by Kamm.

When the first three batters in the next frame tied the string at 4-all, on Myatt's opening double, a sacrifice and Jablonowski's single, Fischer rushed to Crowder's relief and finally turned in his tenth victory of the year—a feat he has been trying to accomplish for more than a month. His slants were knicked for three runs in the last two frames, but he was not bearing down at this stage of the game, for his mates came right back in their fifth to take the lead again and to add to it as the game progressed.

Montague's two-base error helped the Nats to break the deadlock in the fifth, for it was followed by Manush's triple, with the latter registering when Burnett's throw home on West's roller was late.

Two errors by Burnett on the same play, a wild pitch, a pass, singles by Spencer and Bluege and Cronin's second double of the day netted three more markers in the sixth, while the Nats scored once each in the next two frames just to keep in the habit.

Burnett partially atoned for his three errors by leading his team at bat with the same number of hits, all singles.

Farley Is on Wrong Side Of Every Issue But Right Throughout, Pegler Finds

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.
Special to The Washington Post.

NEW YORK, July 27.—After all these years, I am beginning to appreciate the political genius of James A. Farley, not because of anything he may have done in the dark councils of Tammany Hall, but because, as chairman of the New York prize fight commission, he has, at one time or another, been wrong on every issue and yet consistently right throughout. In the details of his administration, Mr. Farley has uttered more absurd findings than a dozen Wickersham Commissions could devise in as many years; still, in a broad sense, I find he has never made a mistake.

He always realized that the prize fight racket is only a racket, after all, and governed the boys accordingly. That he once barred Primo Carnera for notorious offenses against the canons of sportsmanship, only to reinstate him, impenitent and unwhipped, a few months later; that he will not acknowledge Max Schmeling as heavyweight champion of the world and that he compromised with such an irritating phony as Mickey Walker and put him in the way to make a lot of money, I am as well aware as any one. But that he also has preserved the beloved and despicable racket for the entertainment of the masses and the press I am none the less aware.

Mr. Farley is closer to 7 feet than 6 feet tall. He is as smooth as oil, he is well-behaved in his private and social life, and he has the quiet but driving energy and executive courage that I have noticed in only a few men among perhaps a thousand big shots, including some of international significance. Now I begin to suspect that if the Democratic party comes along to enjoy any luck in the next

Vince Dundee Fights Slow Draw With Hood, Champion of Britain

LONDON, July 27 (A.P.).—Vince Dundee, Baltimore middleweight, boxed ten slow rounds to a draw with Jack Hood, British welterweight champion, in a ten-round nontitle bout here tonight.

It was a dull affair most of the way, as both Dundee and Hood adopted a cautious attitude toward one another. Dundee hammered away at Hood's ribs until at the end the Briton's midriff resembled a red sunset. Hood, on the other hand, pecked away at Dundee's face with a long left that did not hurt the American.

Cubs Lose Stephenson Due to Sprained Ankle

Chicago, July 27 (A.P.).—Riggs Stephenson, Cubs outfielder, probably will be lost to his team for several weeks, having sprained his ankle in the first inning of the Chicago-Philadelphia game today. He was injured sliding into first base and was carried off the field.

Harridge Sees Box Office Slump Due to Long Lead of Athletics

PHILADELPHIA, July 27 (A.P.).—William Harridge, president of the American Baseball League, said here today he feared financial returns for the remainder of the season would slump because of the long lead the Philadelphia Athletics possess.

He witnessed the Philadelphia-St. Louis game with Tom Connolly, chief of umpires. He asserted that conditions in the league were satisfactory and that although he foresaw a slump in box office receipts, club owners and the league would realize a profit.

LAVERNE FATOR RIDES 3 STRAIGHT WINNERS AT EMPIRE

Veteran Pilot Contributes Feature

Scores With Tommy Lad, Chief's Challenger, Oncora.

Knight's Call Lowers 7-Furlong Record at Arlington.

By ORLO ROBERTSON.

NEW YORK, July 27 (A.P.).—The scintillating riding of Laverne Fator, generally rated as America's premier jockey, stood out in bold relief as the feature of racing on the country's three major tracks today.

In a performance that took its place among the topnotch riding feats of the year, Fator brought three of his four mounts in first and finished third with the other at Empire City.

After finishing third astride Whisking in the opening event, the popular contract rider for E. R. Bradley proceeded to win the next three races. F. Pruyn's Tommy Lad at 4 to 1 was the first winner. Then followed L. B. Humphreys' Chief's Challenger, a 2-to-1 shot, and the Black and White Stable's Oncora, 11 to 5 winner of the feature event.

Oncora Beats Out
60-to-1 Shot.

Fator's best ride of the day was aboard Oncora, which just got up in the last few strides to beat Lew Black, a 60-to-1 chance.

Another track record fell at Arlington Park as the Audley Farm's Knight's Call returned to form to set a new 7-furlong mark of 1:22 4-5 in accounting for the Seminole Purse The time was two-fifths of a second faster than the mark established by Ned O July 19 of last year. The Audley Farm's 3-year-old had the race all to himself, finishing three and one-half lengths in front of the Nevada Stock Farm's Voltagreen, with W. R. Coe's Rockabelle another three lengths to the rear in third place.

Bargello Scores
At Latonia.

C. V. Whitney's Bargello, an outstanding 3-year-old in 1929, continued to show speed as a 5-year-old, accounting for the 1 1-16 mile feature at Latonia. It was the fifth triumph in eight starts for the son of Bunting this year.

The field of four stayed closely bunched until a sixteenth of a mile from home and then Kenneth Russell sent Bargello out into a lead which he never relinquished. Eddie Haughton's Kincsen finished second and W. H. Whitehouse's Royal Julian with R. W. Collins' Don Leon bringing up the rear.

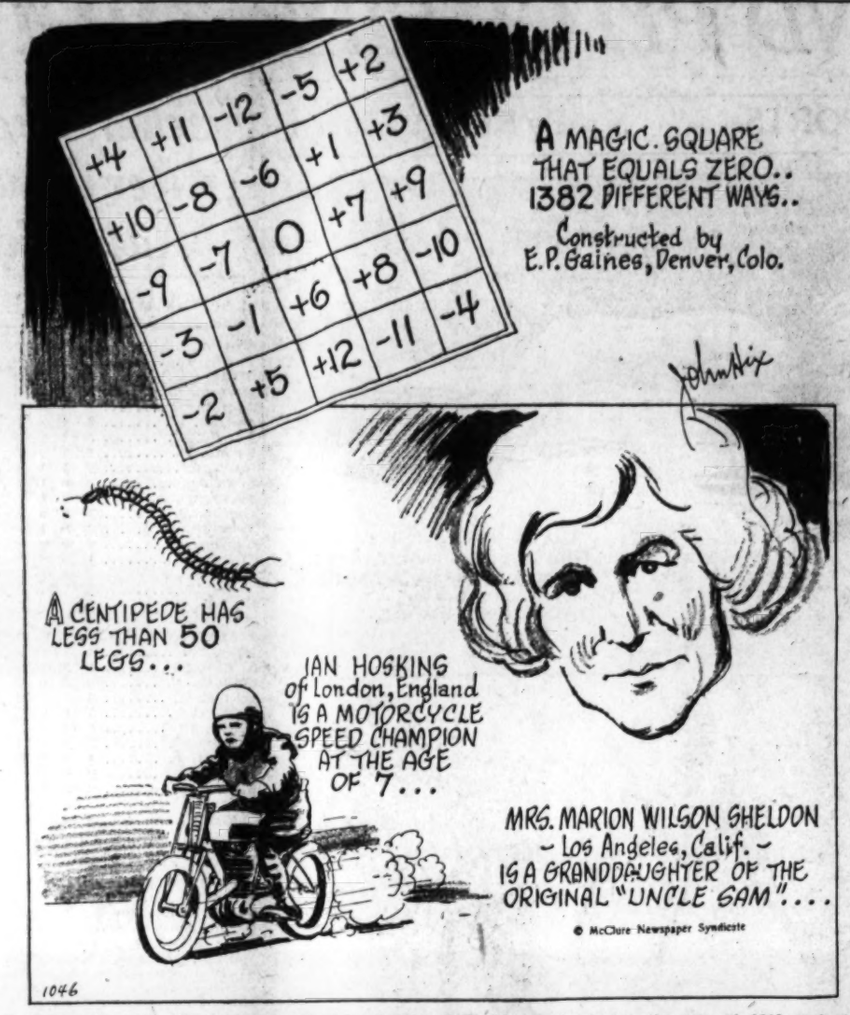
STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix



IN constructing the above magic square that equals zero, E. P. Gaines, of Denver, Colo., introduced a novelty. Using five cells each time, there are 1,382 different ways of producing zero. Mr. Gaines states there are a few hundred additional ways to add zero by using combinations of more and less than five cells.

The first monument to Samuel Wilson, Uncle Sam, was recently erected by his only surviving direct descendant, Mrs. Marion Wilson Sheldon, of Los Angeles, Calif., his granddaughter. Samuel Wilson was the man who was so singly honored when his name became the accepted sobriquet for the United States. Since 1854, when he died, his grave in Troy, N. Y., has been marked by a plain marble slab. The new monument is a four-ton granite boulder, rectangular in shape, on the front of which is a bronze tablet with this inscription:

"U. S. in loving memory of 'Uncle Sam,' the name originating with Samuel Wilson * * * 1766-1854 * * * during the war of 1812 and since adopted by the United States. Erected in 1931 by his granddaughter, Marion Wilson Sheldon."

Oddly enough, Uncle Sam was born before the United States.

LOOPS PLAN WEEK-DAY SERIES

Lack of Field Is Big Problem Facing Committee.

WITH only this week's games remaining on the regular schedule of all week-day league, officers of the week-day league championship series have already commenced to lay plans for the annual series. All of the leagues have several postponed games which must be disposed of to decide the second half champions.

In order to speed up play in running off the postponed contests, teams will be eliminated when they are put out of the running for the title. Those desiring to play their remaining games will be scheduled last.

Tentative Series Plans Made.

George L. Hightman presided over a meeting of league representatives held last week at which tentative plans for the titular series were made. The most important matter which must be settled is the site of the playing field. With the Terminal diamond gone, this problem looms as a serious obstacle to be overcome.

Several suggestions were received recommending the American League Park, but in view of the fact that the series was a financial failure when the games were played there several seasons ago, none of the suggestions were accepted.

A committee was appointed to interview Col. U. S. Grant 3d, in charge of public parks, and seek his permission to play the series on one of the Ellipse diamonds and to take up a collection at the games. None of the teams competing the series is benefited by the funds so collected, as the latter goes to defray expenses incurred in staging the championship games.

Should there be a surplus after all expenses had been met, the leagues are willing to turn it over to a charitable organization or to the Community Chest.

Leagues May Raise Funds
For Series.

Should this plan be rejected the committee plans to secure a playing field convenient to the fans, where a small fee could be charged to offset the expenses. If such a field is not available, each league may endeavor to raise funds to promote the series, and in this event either the Ellipse or the Washington Barracks diamond, if the latter could be obtained, would be used.

There will be no "padding" of teams this year as there has been in the past. Each team will be allowed to carry a roster of eighteen players, all of whom were signed before July 10. All playing rules and regulations were discussed and league representatives instructed to familiarize the winners of each half in their respective leagues with the same.

McGraw Back to Old Ways To Create Fight in Giants

McGRAW and MACK in 1911

The New York Giants have got to start fighting, Manager John McGraw has decided. McGraw has. He's been ejected from the park twice this year, and suspended once for "rowing" with umpires. He is shown above (left) as he appears in good humor, and (right) following a "bad decision." McGraw is shown below in his really pugnacious days, with Connie Mack during the 1911 world's series.

NEW YORK, July 25 (A.P.).—John McGraw is getting plenty tired of seeing the Giants beaten out in the ninth inning.

One complaint about the New York Team this season has been that, though it is made up of nice young men and shapes up powerfully on paper, it has gone through the motions of a game in slightly mechanical fashion.

The pugnacious battling which in past years made the club one of the most feared around the National League has been missing. Sixteen times this year the Giants have been beaten out in the ninth inning. This has happened to a team that carries a tradition of rushing from behind and remaining a threat until the final man was out.

It is not difficult to imagine what such a condition means to McGraw, one of the most fiery players developed in the hurly-burly days of the game at the start of the twentieth century.

Twice already this season McGraw has been ejected from the park, a thing that hadn't happened to him in several seasons previously. On the last occasion McGraw was suspended for three days for using alleged abusive language on Umpire Clarke at St. Louis.

Whether or not McGraw's return to the umpire baiting manners he used while a member of the old Baltimore Orioles and while leading the Giants to pennants in 1904 and 1905, and later on in 1911, '12 and '13, puts more games into the won column is yet to be seen.

However, it does appear that he has the club fighting. Even the mild-mannered George Burns, baseline coach, was stirred up in McGraw's last controversy and sent from the park. During McGraw's suspension Acting Manager Bancroft was banished for disputing a decision.

Fawsett, D. C. Champion, Enters National Trapshoot

CLIFFORD C. FAWSETT, champion trap shooter of the Washington Gun Club, will represent this city in the State championship shoot to be held at Vandalia, Ohio, the week beginning August 24. Mr. Fawsett, who is also vice president of the club, won the local title in competition with other members of the club during June.

It will not be the winner's first trip to the national championship matches, as he was State champion from Maryland in 1922 and again in 1926. The District of Columbia was then included in Maryland territory, the local charter being granted only recently. Mr. Fawsett scored 184 targets out of a possible 200 to win.

Between 800 and 1,200 marksmen will gather for the national matches, only the State champions, however, will be eligible to compete in the State championship match, which is termed the "Champion of Champions" event. The meet will open Tuesday with 16-yard target fire. Wednesday the State champions shoot; Thursday the preliminary handicap competition begins, and the meet will close on Friday with the grand American handicap championship, which is worth $1,000 and a trophy to the winner. Handicap matches will be fired at a distance of from 16 to 25 yards, according to the classification of the entrant, shooting 100 targets. The grand American event is regarded as the supreme test in many quarters. Mr. Fawsett plans to participate in all of the matches listed.

CHICAGO GETS MEET.

New York, July 27 (A.P.).—Subject to final approval of the American Olympic committee, Chicago has been selected for the final Olympic women's track and field tryouts on July 16, 1932.

The American women's team will be limited to eighteen athletes.

four or eight years, James A. Farley, chairman of the New York State Democratic committee, the same who has been so roundly and so rightfully ridiculed for his funny administration as chairman of the prize fight commission, will be a sort of Mark Hanna and quite a bit of a fellow.

The political shenanigans of the prize fight trade are really but a low comedy counterpart of national politics, and if Farley now approves of Primo, weren't there some great Republican statesmen who stormed up and down the country before the Kansas City convention not quite four years ago warning the electorate against that dangerous man, H. Hoover, only to turn about a few weeks later and commend him to the country as the one man than whom no other man was better qualified to govern the U. S. A.?

Praise the Victim of Their Tirades.

I heard them in Kansas City, those saviors, out to avert the calamity of Hoover, calling themselves the allies and passing unkind remarks about him, and I have never recovered from the puzzlement I felt when, after the nomination, they all hopped up on barrels—not kegs, mind you; for flour comes in barrels and beer in kegs—to praise the victim of their recent objurgations.

Once, in a private interview with Mr. Farley, I heard him remark that he had understood beforehand and had learned beyond question afterward that a notorious prize fight held in his jurisdiction was a phony. But, said he, the prosperity of the prize fight trade and, in a smaller degree, the prosperity of the City of New York required that one of the parties to this phony, to-wit, the victor, be not denounced under the official seal of the prize fight commission. The greatest good of the largest number required that the victor remain technically O. K. Possibly Mr. Farley was wrong here, for prize fighting is not as important as national politics, but I found myself instinctively recalling with what noble forbearance Mr. Coolidge and his campaign orators in 1924 had similarly omitted to repudiate the last previous administration.

Evades Letter of Duty to Save Game.

At the time, if Mr. Farley had exposed the phony and forever banished all parties thereto, as he once had banished a famished preliminary boy in Staten Island for biting his opponent, he would have provoked such a hue and cry as might have outlawed the prize fight industry for years, to the great distress of some rather solid financial interests. The victim, of course, was outlawed, but silently, forever. It was an evasion of the letter of his duty and of the furious laws of the prize fight trade to ignore the more blameworthy party to this fraud, but in politics is it the petty ballot box stuffer who does his thirty days under glass, or is it the candidate in whose interest he stuffs the box?

I have an idea that Mr. Farley regards the prize fight trade as a caricature of the political trade, possibly heightening the phonies and the compromises for the sake of caricature, but, in principle, no different.

Prize fighting being a nonessential and hilarious industry, Mr. Farley can do no wrong, no matter how wrong he may be on any given proposition. His job as chairman of the prize fight commission therefore has given him a great opportunity to work out on the punching dummy, so to speak. He has learned about the public's knack of forgetting and schooled himself in the knack of confusing issues.

Reinstates Walker In Recent Emergency.

Did he bar Mickey Walker three years ago for refusing to defend the middleweight title, obtained by dubious means and treacherous promises from the late Tiger Flowers? He did, and, in the recent emergency, he reinstated Mickey for the fight with Sharkey. But the customers remember that no better than the issues in the last election, granting that they remember the last election.

Most indicative, though, is the fact that the New York prize fight commission, say what any one will, still remains the White House of the prize fight trade, notwithstanding the left wing movements of the Illinois commission, with the solemn Brig. Gen. John J. Clinnin in charge. The very fact that the other commissions get so sore at Mr. Farley's commission for his arbitrary judgments and his oblivious disregard of facts is a sort of admission that the New York commission, under Mr. Farley, is the boss commission of the entire prize fight trade. Mr. Farley never gets sore at the Illinois commission.

The prize fight business to Mr. Farley is mere gymnasium work to sharpen his politics for a greater bout to come in 1932.

D. C. GOLFERS MAKE BID TODAY

7 Seek to Qualify for U. S. Amateur in Richmond Trials.

Special to The Washington Post.

RICHMOND, Va., July 27.—Seven Crack golfers from the District of Columbia will invade Richmond tomorrow to battle for the right to compete in the national amateur championship tournament at the Beverly Country Club, Chicago, on August 31.

The occasion will be the sectional qualifying round and the scene one of Richmond's most treacherous golf courses, the Hermitage Country Club. This contingent from Washington, in whose ranks are either present or former champions, will seek the six places allotted the Richmond district.

Field of 20 Battles For 6 Places.

In view of the fact that District golfers have walked off with honors in previous sectional professional tests, it would not be surprising to see the visitors carry their colors to the front again.

A field of twenty will compete. Billy Howell, one of the two local entries, State amateur, Middle Atlantic champion and conqueror of Phil Perkins, former British champion, will carry this city's hopes, and will be playing over his home course.

Of the visiting brigade, Walter McCallum, veteran golfer and writer, looms as a strong bet to qualify. McCallum soared to dizzy heights in the recent Middle Atlantic tilt at Virginia Beach only to lose to Howell in the finals. Miller B. Stevinson is another powerful contestant, while John Shorey, of Bethesda, is remembered for his brilliant playing in the Middle Atlantic tourney here last year.

Then there is the long-hitting Parker Nolan, who never fails to reward spectators with brilliant shooting. Three other District players, Harry G. Pitt, James G. Drain and Thomas P. Bones, are expected to make strong bids.

Baltimore Represented By Stars.

Several of Baltimore's prominent amateur golfers are entered; these include Harry Parr, Alec Knapp, Earnest Caldwell, Tom Symington.

With the Hermitage course groomed to a state of near perfection, under the supervision of Tommy Galloway, club professional, scoring should be low, although the recent addition of a number of traps has stiffened some of the holes.

9:05-1:05—Chandler Harper, Virginia Beach, and Walter R. McCallum, Washington.
9:10-10:10—J. W. Harvey, jr., Baltimore, and Thomas F. Cole, Baltimore.
9:15-10:15—Harris Jones, Baltimore, and Harry G. Pitt, Washington.
9:20-1:20—Miller B. Stevinson, Washington, and Edgar Lucas, Baltimore.
9:25-1:25—Harry A. Parr 3d, Baltimore, and M. Parker Nolan, Washington.
9:30-1:30—James G. Drain, Washington, and Alex M. Knapp, Baltimore.
9:35-1:35—Carl W. Snook, Frederick, Md.; Billy Howell, Richmond, and Thomas R. Symington, Baltimore.
9:40-1:40—John C. Shorey, Bethesda, Md.; Ernest L. Caldwell, Baltimore, and Thomas P. Bones, Washington.

DIAMOND DUST FROM THE SANDLOTS

"STRANGE as it seems," way back in 1913, on May 20, to be exact, "Finney" Kelly, who used to be the best of them all on the sandlots, hurled a game in which he struck out eighteen men and lost by a score of 17-1. "Finney" was hurling for the First Methodist Episcopal Church against the Ninth Street Christian Church team in the old Sunday School League.

The ability of the catcher (whose name we neglected to note) to fumble third strikes accounted for the downfall of Kelly. If this doesn't beat all records for terrible playing, or tough luck, we would like to hear of the others.

The Marion A. C. is booking games for August and September with strong unlimited teams. The Marions would especially like to book out-of-town games. Teams interested are requested to call Lincoln 4876 between 7 and 8 p. m.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

THE DISADVANTAGES OF COOKING.

SUCH disadvantages of cooking as there are relate principally to expense and inconvenience and the loss of vitamins and minerals. In some of the cooking processes the minerals are leached out of the foods. This is true of boiling of meats and most of the processes for canning meats. It is especially true of all methods of cooking vegetables in which any considerable amount of water is added and in which the juices and liquors are discarded. Some minerals are leached out by fats, if there is much dripping of grease during the cooking process.

There are several methods for correcting these faults. The liquors and gravies should be saved and added to the article of which they are leachings; or else they can be served separately, to be used as a dressing for bread, potatoes and other vegetables. The pot liquors can be eaten with breads or they can be incorporated with soups. The liquor from meats cooked for canning can be put in the can with the meat or in separate cans of sauce stocks. In the case of potatoes, apples and such the peel can be baked on the vegetable or fruit.

As a rule, the vitamins are heat stable. Cooking neither destroys nor removes them. The instable vitamin is that which prevents scurvy. Even this one withstands certain kinds of cooking. For instance, milk that is quickly evaporated contains most of its antiscorbutic vitamin. On the other hand, cooking for a long time, or in the presence of cooking soda, or where there is much air, is highly destructive to the vitamin. If one must get his antiscorbutic vitamin from cooked vegetables he should see to it that they are not cooked with soda or cooked overlong.

There are a few situations in which the inconvenience and expense of cooking on the spot are disadvantageous. Serving hot lunches in schools is a good illustration. The expense and inconvenience of the school kitchen and school dining room is an unjustifiable load on the taxpayer. It diverts money from education. It has made it impossible for pupils in many schools to get a school lunch. Schools that could easily afford a cold lunch can not measure up to the requirements of the modern school lunch.

In certain fields the inconvenience and expense of home cooking is being economically met by centralized cooking. Instances are the baking of breads, the canning industries, the making of soups and the pasteurization of milk.

The dangers due to exposure of the completed product are overcome by the use of sealed cans and bottles and by the use of wrapping.

The customary requirement that food should be carried from the stove to the table was based on a sound hygienic principle. However, it has served to build up certain practices that have some disadvantages. For one thing, it has accustomed us to serve most foods when they are too hot.

DISTRESSING EXPERIENCE.

Mrs. A. A. writes: I was 19 years old when I, a healthy, normal woman, married a man who seemed to be normal and healthy. I have borne twelve children—nine boys and three girls. When the first boy was 2 years old he developed convulsions. The physician said he was a helpless idiot. He died at 14 years of age. The other eight boys were affected the same way. One girl is in a home for epileptics and I expect the other two girls to develop the same trouble. Now my husband is showing signs of the same sickness. This makes me believe in heredity and in examination before marriage.

REPLY.

Your experience is distressing, but I am not certain ordinary examination before marriage would have helped in your case. Both yourself and your husband were in good health then and for years afterward. In all probability some members of your family or your husband's are feeble-minded. That quality is inherited. A mental examination which included the family history as to feeble-mindedness might have prevented the trouble.

MISSING HEART BEATS.

C. H. writes:

1. What causes the heart to miss a beat now and then in a boy of 18 years who is apparently in excellent health?
2. Would smoking cigarettes have any effect on the heart?
3. Would the moderate use of coffee, two or three cups a day, using no cream or milk, be harmful?
4. Is this a dangerous condition?
5. How can it be remedied? (The tonsils were removed about four years ago.)

REPLY.

1. Adolescence, rapid growth, anemia, nervousness.
2. It might.
3. It might.
4. No.
5. Overcome what is wrong.

STOCK SALES DROP LOWEST IN 7 YEARS

Turnover Is 580,310 Shares With Small Gains in Industrial Issues.

New York, July 27 (A.P.).—The stock market today was about as uneventful as a five-hour session could be. Prices of principal industrial and utility issues closed higher in contrast to the heavy rails, but the colorless transactions of professional traders provided the smallest turnover since October, 1924. The total was 580,310 shares, which was under last Monday's volume.

Sterling exchange maintained a position just over the gold point against the dollar and the flow of reserves to Paris appeared to have been checked. London advices said shipments previously engaged had been canceled.

Unconfirmed rumors that French banks were discussing a $100,000,000 credit to the Bank of England were received with surprise here. There was some talk last week that the $300,000,000 gold credit made available to the British bank in this country several years ago, but never used, might be revived. Bankers said most certainly it could be had if desired.

Steel Prospects Discounted.

The prospect of a lower United States Steel dividend was in the back of the stock market's mind, and served to restrain trading, although the 2-point net gain by the shares of the industrial leader made it appear that professionals either were not sure a cut would be made or that such action had been discounted. Nevertheless, with the actual decision of the directors still a day away traders in neither camp cared to take much of a chance.

Rail shares tended to reduce their losses when the other major groups broke out of the rut on the upside during the last hour, but at the close Norfolk & Western was off 5 and Union Pacific and Baltimore & Ohio 2. Nickel Plate 6 per cent preferred broke 8½ points on a few sales. June earnings reports are making more favorable comparisons with 1930 than did May, but returns are only about half in.

Utility issues came forward with a faint show of strength toward the finish. Motors, oils and coppers were firm. American Can yielded part of its extreme rise, but, together with American Telephone, Johns-Manville, Union Carbide and American & Foreign Power, closed a point higher.

Improvement Fractional.

Improvement in such issues as Bethlehem, Radio, General Electric, Westinghouse, General Motors, Anaconda, Kennecott and Chrysler was fractional. American Woolen preferred hopped up more than 3 points. Auburn was the day's weak spot, off 10 at the close.

There was little domestic news from industry. The wage question came to the fore when a financial news ticker printed a letter from Secretary Lamont to a Rhode Island representative in which the Commerce Department head pointed out the difficulties into which the depression had thrown companies unprotected by substantial reserves, making the alternatives a complete shutdown or temporary wage reductions.

Wheat eased, closing unchanged to ¾-cent off on forecasts of cooler Canadian weather, rains in the Dakotas and a large increase in visible supply. Short covering boosted July corn nearly 3 cents. Other positions rallied, but moderately. Cotton lost 6 to 11 points net.

Foreign currency dealings were small. Rates on the continental exchanges sagged, while the Argentine peso touched a new low. Chile, however, was steady.

BOND PRICES STAND UNCHANGED IN SALES

Market Is Dull With Gains, Losses Equal on Day's Trading at Close.

New York, July 27 (A.P.).—The bond market wavered back and forth today in dull trading. Closing prices were highly irregular. Average prices for industrial and public utility issues showed slight gains, but the decline in the railroad average was sufficient to make the composite price for the three groups unchanged. Foreign obligations declined irregularly.

The action of German 5½s of 1965 and the 7s of 1949 reflected returning confidence in European affairs. Both of these issues were higher throughout the day and the trading in them was sharply reduced. However, several loans of the German Central Agricultural Bank and the series C 6½s of the United Steel Works reached new lows. Other obligations of that nation made mixed changes.

Belgium 7s of 1955 and of 1956 reached new bottom prices also, but recovered most of their losses by the close. Chilean bonds receded from 1 to 3½ points and some of the Chile mortgage bank issues hit new low records too. Brazilian National and Provincial loans scored good gains. United Kingdom 5½s were active and firm.

Loans of the United States Government turned dull but easy. Railroad obligations provided much of the action among domestic corporate bonds and their trend was plainly downward. Canadian Pacific debenture 4s, Chesapeake & Ohio series B 4½s, Chicago, Burlington & Quincy general 4s, Rock Island refunding 4s, Illinois Central 4¾s of 1966, Delaware & Hudson 5½s of 1937, Nickel Plate series C 4½s, St. Louis San Francisco 4½s of 1978 and Norfolk & Western consolidated 4s were among the more active rails to recede.

Public utility loans had a sagging tendency which did not go far and many of them closed unchanged or slightly higher. Industrial bonds were quiet and firm.

LUTHERAN CHURCHES IN PATH OF BUILDING TALK CONSOLIDATION

Three Congregations Among Oldest in City Faced by Encroachment.

COUNCILS TO WEIGH MOVE FRIDAY NIGHT

Reduction of Memberships Seen as Families Go From Section.

Three of the oldest Lutheran churches in Washington, located in the Southwest and Southeast sections, are considering merging into one organization because of the encroachment of the Government building program on their congregations, it was learned last night.

The churches are St. John's, at 320 Four-and-one-half street southwest; St. Mark's, 800 B street southwest, and the Church of the Reformation, 208 B street southeast.

Councilmen of the three churches will meet next Friday night at the Church of the Reformation to discuss the merger. They have received instructions from members of the churches to attend the meeting and report, it was learned.

Many Members Move Away.

Proposal to combine the churches is viewed in different lights by various Lutherans. Some of the older members feel sentimental attachment toward buildings and are reluctant to give them up.

Others, seeing a need to keep pace with changing Washington, express the hope that an amicable agreement may be reached. Combining of the churches is necessary, some say, because of the movement of many residents to other parts of the city.

St. John's, the oldest of the three, was organized in 1855 under the name of St. Paul's. The present name was adopted soon after. The building was enlarged and practically rebuilt in 1903. The church has had seven pastors, including the present one, the Rev. George H. Eveler, who became pastor in 1925. The confirmed membership is about 250; communing membership, 135. Estimated valuation of the church property is $55,000.

Church Founded in 1869.

The Church of the Reformation was organized in 1869. Services were held in the first ten years in an old schoolhouse and an army hospital building. Then the corner stone of the present structure was laid. The church was organized by the Rev. W. E. Parson, who died after serving it a quarter of a century. He was succeeded in 1906 by the present pastor, the Rev. John Weidley, who is also president of the National Lutheran Home for the Aged.

This church has a confirmed membership of 470 and a communing membership of 344. The church property has an estimated valuation of $75,000.

St. Mark's Lutheran Church was organized in 1887. The first pastor was the Rev. W. H. Gotwald. The first permanent place of worship was on C street near Twelfth street southwest. This structure was later destroyed by fire and the present church, at the corner of Eighth and B streets southwest, was completed in 1905. The present pastor is the Rev. H. Dennington Hayes. Confirmed members numer 200 and communing, 150. The church property has an estimated valuation of $49,000.

Illness Postpones Police Chief's Case

Alexandria Court Is Told Campbell Too Sick to Appear.

The scheduled hearing of charges of stealing vegetables from the Alexandria market against Capt. W. W. Campbell, deposed chief of the Alexandria police, was postponed yesterday until this morning, despite the objections of Commonwealth Attorney Albert Bryan.

The postponement was made on the basis of a certificate from Campbell's physician stating that the accused man was too ill to appear in court. It was said that Campbell was forced to remain in bed all day Sunday and most of yesterday.

Campbell was arrested Thursday night on a warrant sworn out by Julian F. Chauncey, proprietor of a stand in the city market, who claimed that he and a salesman hid nearby to catch the person who had been taking merchandise from his stand for several weeks. Charles Henry Smith is appearing as attorney for Campbell.

$10,000 Suit Is Filed Over Kit of Tools

In a $10,000 damage suit filed in District Supreme Court yesterday against the Gas Consumers Association, 1004 Tenth street northwest, Winfield S. Gardner, of 1118 Tenth street northwest, charged negligence to an agent of the association, alleged to have left a kit of tools on a basement stairway, over which the plaintiff stumbled and fell.

He suffered serious injuries from the fall, Mr. Gardner, who was represented by attorney Alvin L. Newmyer, told the court. He said the accident occurred last March, while the association's agent was employed installing a gas appliance at his home.

Wind Blows Gas Out; Young Wife Near Death

Mrs. Dorothy Hill, 18-year-old housewife, had a narrow escape from death yesterday in her home at 4700 Ninth street northwest when the wind extinguished gas burners in the stove after she had fallen to the floor in a faint. She has been ill of late, according to police.

A member of the family, entering the kitchen to find the young woman unconscious and gas flowing from the range, summoned the rescue squad. She was removed to Emergency Hospital after receiving first aid treatment. Her condition was held not serious.

Thieves Get $70 in Jewelry.

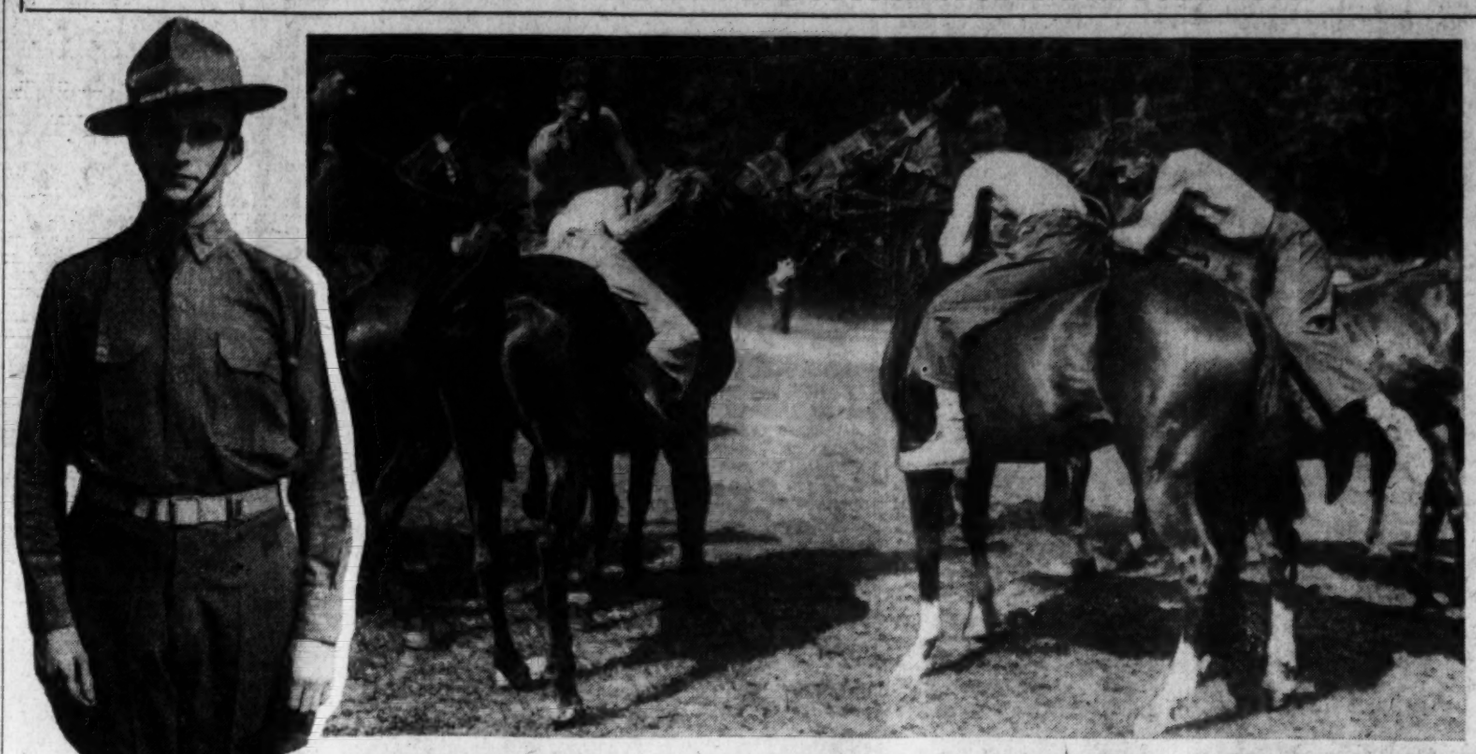
CAPITAL MAN IS ADJUDGED BEST BLUE COURSE STUDENT AT FORT MYER



Louis Johrden, Post Staff Photographer.

In photo on left is W. M. Arehart, 23, of 1623 Connecticut avenue, who was adjudged yesterday the best blue course student at the Citizens' Military Training Camp being held at Fort Myer. He will receive the Veterans of Foreign Wars trophy and the United Spanish War Veterans' medal. Other picture shows jousting on horseback.

CAPITAL YOUTH HELD BEST CAMP SOLDIER

Will Receive Medal Today; Parents Entertained; Review Planned.

The best student soldier in the blue course at the Citizens' Military Training camp at Fort Myer is W. M. Arehart, 23 years old, of 1623 Connecticut avenue northwest, his officers decided yesterday. He will receive the Veterans of Foreign Wars trophy and the United Spanish War Veterans medal.

The camp was turned over to parents of the young men in training yesterday and about 300 fathers and mothers came out to watch their sons go through the routine of camp life and to witness the special program arranged for the day.

The citizen soldiers staged a parade for their fathers and mothers at 4.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and during the morning a track meet was held. In the afternoon various events of horsemanship were presented, including an equipment race and a potato race on horseback.

The parents were guests of their sons and the officers of the camp at lunch, dining with the boys at the camp mess hall.

Maj. Gen. George V. H. Moseley, deputy chief of staff, U. S. A., will take the place of Maj. Gen. Fred W. Sladen, commander of the Third Corps Area who, with military attaches of foreign nations, was to have reviewed the youths in the Citizens Military Training Camp at Fort Myer this afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Among the awards is the MacArthur Trophy awarded to the best senior in camp.

The American Gold Star Mothers will give a prize for excellence in citizenship. Medals for citizenship will also be given to the winning student in each of the troops by the Civitan Club of Baltimore.

Japanese Park Expert To Study System Here

Mamoru Kishi, member of the Japanese Parliament, accompanied by Mme. Kishi, arrived at the Hotel Mayflower yesterday. Mr. Kishi will make extensive study of the Federal park system in and around Washington.

Mr. Kishi is known as the "father" of the park system in Japan and has been sent to this country preparatory to the launching of more national parks in his native land. He has already visited a number of the large parks in Western States and conferred with Secretary of the Interior Wilbur in Salt Lake City several weeks ago concerning administration of the park system.

"Your parks are a perfect model for my country to copy," Mr. Kishi said. "I first was impressed with their beauty when visiting in this country 16 years ago." Mr. and Mrs. Kishi were attired in native Japanese dress, including sandals. They plan to call on President Hoover at the White House while here.

SCHENCK IS ORDERED BROUGHT TO CAPITAL

Writ Signed to Return Him Here for Testimony; New Affidavit Received.

An affidavit of Frederick A. Schenck, former Washington policeman, in which he amplifies his charges of malfeasance by police and prosecuting officials, is in possession of the Department of Justice and will be submitted to Assistant District Attorney John W. Fihelly for presentation to the grand jury.

Mr. Fihelly yesterday obtained a writ of habeas corpus to bring Schenck from Leavenworth Prison, where he is serving a jail sentence for robbery, to the District where, on August 10, he will testify regarding his reputed knowledge of malfeasance on the part of the accused officials.

Schenck is the only witness who will be called. On the basis of his testimony, other witnesses will be asked to either affirm or contradict his allegations. Many of the officials accused by Schenck are immune from prosecution because of the statute of limitations; but all have indicated their willingness to waive their immunity.

The new statement from Schenck was obtained by Department of Justice agents and will supersede other statements now in the hands of the Government, which were received from other sources.

The affidavit was sought after a letter containing charges of malfeasance against police and prosecuting officials was received by Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, from Schenck. This letter subsequently was turned over to District Attorney Leo A. Rover and several other officials.

The writ of habeas corpus to bring Schenck to the District was signed by Supreme Court Justice O. R. Luhring and directs United States Marshal Edgar C. Snyder to have Schenck in the District on August 10 for the purpose of telling his story to the grand jury.

$382,201 License Revenues Set New Record in District

Collections by Superintendent Wade H. Coombs for Last Fiscal Year Largest of All Time; New Law Urged to Modernize Code.

Wade H. Coombs, superintendent of licenses, yesterday reported what will constitute his largest year's collections for all time, in view of the transfer of the motor vehicle registration work to the Department of Vehicles of Traffic.

During the fiscal year which ended June 30, last, the License Bureau collected $382,201.39, which was an increase of $25,178.74 over the collections for the fiscal year 1930. Of this tags for 187,638 motor vehicles brought $195,168. This was, respectively, an increase of 13,977 tags and $11,651 over the previous year.

Collections on duplicate motor vehicle licenses, however, showed a slight decrease. Last year, 1,233 license plates amounted to $616, a loss of 25 tags and $12.50. Registration cards duplicated numbered 2,619 and $1,309.50 for the fiscal year 1931, a gain of 72 cards and $36.

Miscellaneous licenses, which this year will constitute the sole activity of the License Bureau, totaled 18,662 last year, and brought $185,437.39 This was a gain of 2,594 and $13,834.24.

Superintendent Coombs in his report to the District Commissioners urged the passage of the proposed new District license code, which was introduced in Congress but never passed. The bill not only does away with the inequalities of the present license laws, according to Mr. Coombs, but it will increase the revenues of the District as well as provide an up-to-date license code.

Man, 40, Arrested In Trust Larceny

Alpheus Sherman Accused by Nurse of Taking $1,266 Tour Fund.

Alpheus J. Sherman, 40, was arrested in Baltimore yesterday by detectives of that city on a warrant sworn out here by Miss Jessie Holt, Children's Hospital nurse, charging larceny after trust in connection with a world tour, for which the nurse claims Sherman had represented himself as agent. Miss Holt said that she gave Sherman $1,266 in 1928 to pay for the trip, but that he disappeared before the tour materialized.

Detective Sergt. Kuehling brought Sherman back to this city early last night after a hearing before a Baltimore magistrate. Sherman was booked at the Tenth Precinct on a charge of larceny after trust, and later released on $1,500 bond.

Beyond the fact that Sherman was arrested after being traced through a series of letters mailed to a waterfront address in Baltimore, neither local nor Baltimore detectives would reveal how they learned the alleged defaulter was in the Maryland city. Sherman gave his Baltimore address as 2530 West Loretta avenue. At the time of his negotiations with Miss Holt, Sherman is said to have had offices in the Transportation Building.

District Will Open New Veteran Office

William Snyder Placed in Charge of Service Created.

A veterans' service office will be opened immediately in the District Building as result of the appointment yesterday by the District Commissioners of William I. Snyder to the position of officer in charge. The office was created by the current appropriations act.

His name was first on a list of three candidates submitted by service organizations.

A native of Wardensville, W. Va., Mr. Snyder is 34 years old. While serving overseas in the World War he was gassed and wounded. In 1923 he was graduated from the National University and has since held a position of examiner in the Veterans' Bureau. His salary is to be $3,000 a year.

Miss Glen Elizabeth Ogle was appointed clerk-stenographer in the office, and an assistant is to be named as soon as Mr. Snyder can be consulted.

THOUGHTS OF A SUMMER VACATION.

I LIKE the Great American Summer Vacation....It keeps one so sticky....There is nothing more satisfying than two or three weeks of discomfort at the boss' expense....I could stay in town and be quite cool and comfortable, but then I would come back to work feeling rested and full of pep....That would break an old-established precedent....There's an unwritten law against a man or woman returning from a two weeks' absence from the office in summer in good condition....You've gotta come back looking awful.

* * * *

What is a summer vacation, anyhow?....Just a lotta dust, humidity, traffic jams....messy strangers looking all hot and withered....huckleberries and warm milk....stuff made from boiled rubber erasers called clam chowder....bluefish....blackberries....hotel rooms overlooking a public garage....squawking babies....corn on the cob.

* * * *

Why do people leave a nice cool home on a shady street in the city? ....To get a hot room in a fire trap in the country....To get ptomaine poisoning....To give the mosquitoes some fresh pastures. ....To get their ears all buttered up....To sleep on a mattress stuffed with old tomato cans.... To look at a stretch of sea with a string of coal barges and mutter "What a wunnerful view!....To stare at allotta trees and try to think you smell balsam....To find red ants in your berries....To get a tough steak. * * * To be aroused every morning at 4 a. m. by a rooster with a broadcasting complex.... To have to get a haircut from a village barber.

* * * *

WHAT'S the idea behind a vacation anyhow?.....To go some place where you can lie on the sand six hours and have to stay in bed feeling like a burnt plank for five days....To walk a half mile across mudflats to find water up to your neck....To go fishing and discover they're not biting this year....To meet a beautiful girl and discover she knows your wife....To listen to a terrible summer resort orchestra ....To get boiled gold-fish-bowl water called clam broth.

* * * *

Why can I hardly await the day to quit the job and dash off to the seashore or country? ....I like bum food....I've a yen for indigestion....I think I look great with my face boiled and my nose peeling....I like stuffy dining rooms....I'm happiest when struggling with a lobster claw.... I have a passion for buttered corn....I like fogs....And damp clothing....And malaria.

* * * *

What's the big appeal of a summer vacation?....Don't be ridiculous.... You know as well as I do....Four out of seven days rain in some dull spot....At $20 a day!....It's all done by mirrors.

JURY INQUIRY BEGUN IN TEST TAMPERING

Attorney Accused of Effort to Substitute Papers in School Files.

A grand jury investigation into alleged theft of an examination paper from the files of the Franklin School administration by Sylvester McLaurin, colored attorney, was begun yesterday, after McLaurin erlier in the day had been held under $500 bond by Judge Robert E. Mattingly in Police Court.

McLaurin was charged with an attempt to remove the examination paper of his niece, Willi M. McLaurin, applicant for a clerical position in the schools, substituting another paper in its stead.

Frank B. Parker, janitor of the school, told Judge Mattingly McLaurin came to him several times with a request that he be allowed to enter the safe in which are kept examination papers of candidates for jobs. Each time he refused the request the witness said. On one occasion, he charged, McLaurin gave him a dollar and told him to buy some cigars and keep quiet.

Later in the day Parker again told his story before the grand jury. Other witnesses at the grand jury hearing were Howard H. Long, chief examiner for Divisions 10 to 13 of the schools, and Detective John W. Wise, who arrested McLaurin. Afterward it was said that taking of testimony in the case was concluded.

According to the janitor's testimony before Judge Mattingly, Parker, acting under instructions of his employers, finally gave McLaurin the keys to the files. The accused man said to have covered his hand with his handkerchief in opening the doors, removing the paper of his niece, and taking it to an adjoining room, where police, who were secreted, surprised him.

Police See Hoax Theory In Fake Shooting Calls

False telephone calls advising police of supposed shootings have dispatched scout and cruiser automobiles at high speed through the streets, unnecessarily endangering citizens a dozen times in the last three days.

Because of the mounting frequency of false calls, Lieut. Richard Mansfield, night chief of detectives, last night ordered all precincts and telephone operators on the police switchboard to make every effort to check and trace all phone messages of such nature.

Several calls have been recognized by phone operators as coming from the same person, who is a woman. Last night tips on two shootings in the Eleventh Precinct proved to be false, and it is thought the same voice notified police in each instance.

LATEST INDICTMENT ATTACKED BY PITTS

Convicted Man Holds U. S. Illegally Seized Papers in Perjury Case.

Attacking validity of the grand jury indictment for alleged perjury and subornation of perjury, recently returned against himself and four other persons, G. Bryan Pitts, former head of the F. H. Smith Co., yesterday filed twelve pleas in abatement in the District Supreme Court.

The indictments grew out of the introduction of papers attempting to justify alleged defalcations at Pitts' trial. He was sentenced to fourteen years' imprisonment for conspiracy to embezzle funds of the company, and is now in jail awating the outcome of an appeal.

Others indicted with Pitts on the perjury charges were Helen L. Schneider, his private secretary; John H. Edwards, jr., former vice president of the F. H. Smith Co.; Emory L. Coblenz, Frederick, Md., banker, and Henry O. Hart, former auditor of the company.

Vault Raid Held Illegal.

In the pleas filed yesterday, Pitts charged Nugent Dodds, Assistant United States Attorney General, and Neil Burkinshaw, special assistant, used before the grand jury evidence illegally taken from a private vault in Florida. Seven trunks full of papers and two typewriters were seized, he said. The typewriters, it was stated, were shown to jurors to support charges that certain authorizations were spurious.

The pleas, filed through Attorneys Leo Tobriner and Dozier A. DeVane, claim that Pitts should not be required to answer the indictment, as the District Supreme Court recently granted a temporary injunction against the use of the articles taken in Florida.

In assailing the validity of the indictment, Pitts charged that one of the members served only one week and that another member was illegally substituted. He claimed that Regina E. Chandler, while serving on the grand jury, was on the rolls of the District of Columbia as an assistant director of playgrounds. He alleged that Sarah E. Rolph, another member of the grand jury, was the wife of Jesse D. Rolph, the secretary to a Pensylvania representative, and had no gainful occupation.

Women's Service Assailed.

Still another member of the grand jury, John P. Palmer, was a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve, and another, Georgia A. Buchanan, was the wife of a former salesman for the company, who, as stockholders, suffered a loss by the F. H. Smith failure, he charged.

Service of women on grand jurys also was questioned, and other members of the jury attacked. It was charged that Mr. Doods failed to file an authority from the Attorney General to permit him to prosecute the case before the April grand jury.

Appointment of Talma L. Smith as a special assistant to the Attorney General to take the testimony of witnesses, Pitts charged, was a subterfuge to get a shorthand reporter in the grand jury room.

RHEEM CREDITORS FILE 2,600 CLAIMS AGAINST COMPANY

Referee in Bankruptcy Stays in His Office Until Time Limit Expires.

LIQUIDATION MAY TAKE YEARS TO ACCOMPLISH

Trustees Assert Estimates of Probable Dividends Mere Conjecture.

Fred J. Eden, referee in bankruptcy, in the case of the defunct Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey Co., kept to his office until midnight last night, to receive last-minute claims against the bankrupt firm. About 2,600 of these claims had been filed at that time by creditors seeking to recoup vast losses suffered in the failure of the firm.

Creditors were allowed to file claims throughout yesterday, although the calendar six months for filing claims expired at midnight Sunday. Because the day fell on Sunday, which was not a business day, Mr. Eden kept his offices open to receive claims which were delayed.

Midnight Was Deadline.

Midnight was the deadline for filing of claims in the case. Now will begin a period of liquidation of company assets that may extend over a period of five years before trustees succeed in disposing of properties at prices justifying sale.

Trustees of the company said any estimate of the probable percentage of "pay off" would be the merest conjecture at this time, when real estate markets are uncertain, and the exact status of some of the company's properties in question.

Estimates have ranged from 40 cents on the dollar to as high as 60 cents. None have any basis of authenticity, it was stated.

Would Avoid Sacrifices.

Referee Eden said that in liquidating assets every attempt will be made to avoid sacrificing properties at less than their worth, even though it is necessary to take five years to conclude the matter.

Although unnecessary delay will not be tolerated, Mr. Eden pointed out that it would be to the benefit of creditors to await a favorable turn in the realty market. It was indicated that creditors will be paid off in part as funds come in, and some small payment may be made at a meeting to be held within the next month.
